District Is Ready

Today is Registration Day.

At 7 a. m. the doors of 47 District schools will swing open for the vanguard of an estimated 98,000 Capital men 21 to 35, inclusive, who will register for America's first peacetime draft.

"Respond . . . come early . . . move quickly."

That was the appeal last night of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Washington selective service executive, and Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of registration—the long-awaited signal for Washington's contribution to the Nation's military man power.

The appeal came after the draft heads had rechecked the heavy registration machinery, and had struck quickly at a personnel complication that threatened to snarl the system.

Faced with a shortage of registrars when 300 volunteers were found ineligible, Holmes called for an equal number of Government workers to fill the gaps.

Three hundred Treasury workers were rushed to Roosevelt High School late yesterday, given instructions and sworn in.

Having arranged for the emergency appointments, the school head reported: "Now we are ready to go . . . we have enough registrars." He said he hoped, however, registrants would "come early and move quickly" to avoid congestion.

In a move to ease the pressure on registrars at the expected "peak" period in late afternoon after offices close, Holmes designated the greater proportion of the registration per-

Roosevelt to Talk On Registration at 9 A. M.

President Roosevelt will deliver a radio address this morning over all the major networks from the White House on the significance of registration for military training and service.

He will speak about 7 minutes beginning at 9 a. m. (E. S. T.), as some 16,500,000 young Americans start presenting themselves to registration boards throughout the Nation.

Bullets Yield Clew

Mad Sniper Sought as Slayer of 4

Convinced a "dangerous maniac" is at large, police last night mobilized a special squad of detectives to track down a mysterious sniper believed responsible for killing four men and wounding another since September 1.

From ballistics tests conducted by Lieut. John Fowler, it was learned that the same gun which killed 17-year-old Hylan McClaine, colored, 1021 Thirteenth Street Northwest, early yesterday was used in the slaying of two colored men, Theodore Gofney, 823½ Twenty-sixth Street and Samuel Banks, 2600 I Street, October 4.

Bullets removed from the body of McClaine were of the same caliber and bore the same markings as those recovered in the previous

New Shortage In D. C. Bureau Is Revealed

Clerk Quits After Father, City Official, Makes Good Reported Deficit

The District Commissioners yesterday moved swiftly to prevent future shortages in cashier funds as a second cash shortage in the accounts of the Vehicles and Traffic Department was revealed.

Highlights of yesterday's developments, which followed suspension of the cashier and her assistant in the vehicles department because of a $2,000 shortage, were:

Appointment of a three-man board of District officials, headed by Byers M. Bachman, deputy tax assessor, to "investigate the reported shortage in the Office of the Collector of Taxes at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic for the purpose of determining the extent of any shortage and to fix responsibility."

An order to the District Auditor to "immediately audit the revenues, including cash on hand, in each department, service or branch of the District, and thereafter make such audits at least four times each year, and report results to the Board of Commissioners."

Representative T. Overton Brooks apparently defeated Harry A. O'Neal, Shreveport insurance man, in the Fourth District, and Representative Newt V. Mills gained nomination over Edward L. Gladney, of Bastrop, in the Fifth District.

Ajax, Victor Over Graf Spee, Wins Two More Naval Battles

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 15.—H. M. S. Ajax was declared officially tonight to have sunk three Italian destroyers, almost unaided, in two swift Mediterranean battles that rivaled her share in the South Atlantic conquest of the Nazi pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee last December.

Eighty miles off Sicily, within easy striking distance, the admiralty said, of a main Italian fleet that never left its base, the Ajax fought a total of eight warships, one a heavy cruiser.

She fought all by herself until H. M. S. York came up to help her polish off the last of her victims and then her final adversary turned tail and ran, abandoning a crippled sister ship, the official British description said.

Tonight her commander, Capt. E. D. S. McCarthy, was the new man of the hour in Britain's naval annals. His crew, which fought the Graf Spee into Montevideo Harbor and self-destruction ten months ago, again were the heroes of the empire.

York Not Even Scratched

Ajax herself, a 6,985-ton cruiser mounting eight 6-inch guns, was the lonst of the fleet.

She came out of the battle with new scars and a "few" dead and injured, the admiralty said, but she was hit only above the water line and she's ready to fight again any day.

Her last-minute helper, H. M. S. York, a bigger cruiser, wasn't even scratched.

Ironically, the admiralty announced when it was over:

"No contact has been made between our main forces and the main forces of the enemy and there has been no indication that the enemy main forces proceeded to sea."

British officials waited two days to tell their story after the Italians had put out their own version; the Italians, on Sunday, claimed their craft had sunk a cruiser of the Ajax class, but admitted loss of a destroyer and two torpedo boats.

[The Italian version claimed further that Fascist planes later

London, Oct. 15.—Heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force raided Berlin for 75 minutes early this morning, attacked docks, munitions plants, airports and railroad lines deep inside Germany and penetrated all the way to the Baltic coast to batter the Third Reich's limited oil supplies.

In addition to these attacks, carried out by the light of a full moon, a fleet of fast Blenheims crossed the English Channel tonight and bombarded Boulogne and other Channel ports where German invasion fleets are concentrated.

Story of the Kill

Eyewitness Tells How Ajax Guns Thundered to Victory

By Larry Allen,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard the Flagship of the British Mediterranean Fleet, Oct. 15.—From the bridge of this man-o'-war, I watched Britain's warfleet smash a hole in Italy's seapower, sinking three of Premier Mussolini's destroyers in a battle beginning before dawn and ending hours later in the glow of a rainbow stretching over the broad expanse of sea.

It was in last Saturday's gray dawn that the British warships came upon the Italian craft off the southeast coast of Sicily, and in the ensuing battle the cruiser Ajax, hero ship of the South Atlantic victory over the Nazi pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee, emerged a hero for the second time.

Capt. McCarthy
Hero Again

Single-handedly, the Ajax shelled and sank two Italian destroyers, badly damaged a third, the Artigliere, which was finished off a few hours later with a torpedo rammed into her vitals by the cruiser York.

When it was all over, two Italian squadrons had raced full speed to their home bases, leaving the seas to the British.

The Ajax, one of a squadron of cruisers and destroyers forming a protecting screen for the fleet in another wide sweep of the Mediterranean, was splashing through blue calm waters under starlit skies when suddenly she sighted a trio of Italian destroyers at 2:30 a. m.

The Ajax, several miles ahead of this flagship, opened fire immediately with her 6-inch guns, ripping gaping holes in the sides of the Italian crafts' funnels, and sending their masts tumbling down on their decks.

The destroyers answered briefly but after a few salvos their guns were silent.

The Ajax kept up her barrage for several minutes. Then there were terrific blasts as the magazines of two of the Italian ships blew up, and they sank. The other fled into the darkness.

About a half hour later the Ajax met two other Italian destroyers and quickly engaged them. Both turned tail and jammed on full speed. One of them, later identified as the 1,620-ton Artigliere, was hit by the Ajax. A mass of flames leaped from her decks.

Still a few minutes later the Ajax sighted an Italian cruiser and four destroyers, but was unable to make contact with them because they steamed northward in a hurry, making direct for Sicily.

Ajax then turned to the trail of the flaming Artigliere and this flagship dispatched a number of cruisers to join her.

Planes Look Like Silver Bullets

British planes of the fleet air arm, looking like silver bullets in the glow of the rising sun, shot from the decks of aircraft carriers, spotted the burning warship, then being towed by another Italian destroyer.

A small striking force of the fleet air arm was ordered to speed ahead and drop torpedoes around the towing ship. The latter, spotting the approaching aircraft, slipped the tow line and headed for Sicily, leaving the blazing Artigliere to shift for herself.

Some of the Artigliere's crew stubbornly fought the flames rapidly enveloping their ship, while others hurled themselves onto life rafts

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 15.—Calling "defense and jobs" the two main issues of the Presidential campaign, Wendell L. Willkie told a cheering crowd in Memorial Auditorium tonight the voters should demand that President Roosevelt outline his "policies, program and principles" before the November election.

The Republican Presidential nominee declared Mr. Roosevelt should answer such questions as whether he has had any international negotiations without the public's knowledge, whether he has "a new theory of economics that permits a nation to become rich and strong through spending more and more money" and what he thinks "about a fourth term."

After his auditorium address Willkie said in a radio talk that those registering tomorrow for compulsory military service "are registering one more chance for freedom—your chance for freedom."

The candidate said that he and "those who stand with me" promise that "we shall bend all our skill and courage to restore the gigantic industries to build the things that you will need."

"We shall waken America, the whole vast continent of America, to build you armaments," he said.

NO PLACE TO ROOST—In Pennsylvania Railroad yards are these 31-ton Indiana limestone eagles, too heavy for the new Social Security Building

Two massive stone eagles rested last night in earthbound obscurity, en route back to a New York stonecutter, after an ill-fated flight to the top of the new Social Security Building.

Architects ruled the eagles were too big for their perches and brought them back to earth. Their flight was a ponderous performance, aided by workmen and machinery, because each eagle weighed 31 tons.

Louis A. Simon, supervising architect for the Public Buildings Administration, said it was their size, not their appearance. After looking them over, he said, he decided the eagles would need more studying, or maybe more carving.

Simon said he did not know the cost of the eagles, but it was learned that Artist Heinz Warneke had a $3,000 contract for modeling them, while the cost of the Indiana limestone was included in the general contract.

Envoy to Report

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, was aboard the Yankee Clipper when it took off for Europe today.

Considerable secrecy surrounded his presence aboard the flying boat.

His departure followed within a few hours of Secretary Hull's announcement that Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to England, would probably return to this country for a consultation.

The Ambassador was escorted to the Clipper by James Smith, Pan American Airways executive, who replied when questioned: "Sorry, I can't say anything."

Arlington Major Aboard

The Ambassador was booked to return to London on the British flying boat Clyde last week but canceled his reservation a few hours before the departure.

Also aboard the Yankee were Maj. James G. Taylor, of Arlington, Va.; Maj. Robert B. Williams, of Langley Field, Va., and Capt. Reginald F. C. Vance, of Washington, Army officials going abroad on confidential missions.

In Washington, the British Embassy said Lord Lothian had left for London on a routine consultation visit, his first since the outbreak of the war more than a year ago.

'Great Dictator' Captures N. Y.

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 15.—The most stunning theatrical tour de force of this generation left its audiences limp with laughter and shaken with tears tonight when Charlie Chaplin's new film, "The Great Dictator," opened simultaneously in two Broadway theaters.

Despite the extraneous excitements of a dual and dazzling world premiere that stopped traffic in the theatrical district, it was apparent from the moment the film began to unfold that Chaplin had achieved a superb contradiction in terms: The perfection of an eloquent and deeply emotional indictment of dictatorship in terms of hilarious slapstick.

Through the medium of comedy, Chaplin has succeeded in damning dictatorship and all its works more thoroughly, more poignantly and entertainingly than all the indignant dramas that have come out of Hollywood.

Its unexpected and electric conclusion, in which Chaplin makes a profoundly stirring and simple

Bucharest Denies Soviet Invasion; Reich Tanks Go To Danube Port

By Ben A. Thirkield,
The Post Cable Editor.

Signs of an impending explosion in dynamite-laden southeast Europe multiplied swiftly last night with Russia's slowly emerging policy apparently the key to the situation.

With Russia apparently showing a strong hand in moves to check the eastward march of Germany, these developments were added to a series of events which seemed pointed inevitably to the spread of war:

1. Germany was reported to have dispatched several boatloads of troops to Albania, Italian-held spearhead pointed at northern Greece and European Turkey, giving rise to fears of an impending Axis move against Turkey, Greece or Yugoslavia.

2. Three hundred Nazi tanks, guarded by large formations of German warplanes, moved into Rumania's Danube port of Galati, opposite the Russian frontier where the Red army has mobilized between 150,000 and 180,000 men.

3. Bulgarian sources, friendly to Moscow, declared Russia is negotiating a pact with Turkey whereby the U. S. S. R. would give the Turks armed support should Italy and Germany develop a rumored plan to seize the Dardanelles, which traditional Russian policy dictates must be kept from the grasp of a major power.

4. Russia herself added a rare of- ficial statement to the crisis by announcing she had not been informed in advance of Germany's plans to send troops into Rumania, and the Red army's newspaper asserted Russia's armed forces must be kept in "constant mobilized preparedness."

5. Reuters, British news agency, reported in a dispatch which was not confirmed from any other source, that Russian forces already had crossed the new Rumanian frontier in a move to beat Germany to the punch in gaining control of the Danube delta. This was denied by Bucharest.

6. Greece called to the colors engineering and communications specialists in three districts, bolstering an army which for weeks has been watching the Albanian frontier against threatened Italian attack.

7. Turkey, her press protesting that she will not be "frightened" by the Nazi move into Rumania, was reported to have chartered three steamers to speed removal of her nationals from that country.

8. Axis circles in Bucharest ex- pressed belief Germany had received assurances of Russian noninterference in any Axis thrust toward the Dardanelles, but Germany rushed to evacuate 90,000 of her nationals from Soviet-occupied Bessarabia as Moscow refused to extend the November 15 deadline for their removal.

The situation was neither relieved nor clarified by Italian and Yugoslav denials of the presence of Germans in Albania and Rumania's denial the Russians had entered the

Nervous Balkans Await Axis Move

Germans Reported Sending Troops Into Albania

Danube Delta, Russia had already denied previous reports she was negotiating with Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Italy.

Both Russia and Turkey were officially silent today on the reports of a possible mutual assistance pact but the newspaper Ulus, official Turkish government party organ, asserted:

"Turkey has no intention of changing existing friendships, is determined to defend her independence, and still is peacefully inclined."

Turkey counts both Russia and Britain among her friends.

The wide possibilities of an Axis move from Albania to the east through Thrace, an area of Greece and Turkey skirting the Aegean Sea, was freely admitted by foreign military experts in Budapest, the Associated Press said.

In this connection, these observers conjectured, the Axis may intend to build up such overwhelming force in Albania that Greece, which like Turkey, is tied to Britain by a pledge of support, will capitulate and give them the right of way to the Dardanelles.

Contrasting with the indications of approaching conflict were these reports from New York Times correspondents:

1. Turkish circles believe Axis will not move beyond Rumania before spring;

2. German sources in Yugoslavia intimate the Reich is preparing a southeastern front for an "eventual" war against Russia "after England is crushed;"

3. Some neutrals in the Balkans believe Germany is merely taking precautions to protect Rumania's oil from Russia's army and Britain's air force until she is ready to move south "next spring."

C. L. Sulzberger, roving Times correspondent in the Balkans said, however, that many Rumanian officers believe Germany is preparing a Near East campaign in the "near future."

Greece Held Real Goal

In this connection, Ferdinand C. M. Jahn, United Press correspondent expelled from Rumania some months ago, wrote that Germany intends to seize Greek bases for the attack on Britain in Egypt, bypassing Turkey's army and keeping a secret Russo-Germany treaty which he said gave the U. S. S. R. a sphere-of-influence in Turkey and Central Asia.

He argued the German troops in Rumania were for the purpose of cowing Yugoslavia into permitting troop passage into Greece, and influencing Bulgaria in the Axis' favor with the promise of a corridor to the Aegean for the Bulgars.

The positions of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria were clouded by rumors, especially regarding Axis diplomatic pressure, the Associated Press said. Some political circles in Sofia were openly concerned over the possibility of Bulgaria being "forced" into war against Turkey. Other Sofia quarters, including those avowedly pro-Nazi, were inclined to see the developing situation as an opportunity for Bulgaria to advance her revisionist claims.

In general, reports from Sofia indicated the Bulgarians were pleased at the apparent improvement in Soviet-Turkish relations. This was regarded as possible assurance Bulgaria could stay out of war, even if she had to drop her neutrality policy and substitute one of nonbelligerency.

The Bulgarian government, at pains to stay friendly with both the Axis and Russia, is reported adamant in rejecting Axis suggestions that 300,000 to 400,000 men be mobilized as a gesture against Turkey and Greece.

While certain army circles are known to favor the utmost co-operation with Axis military policy, King Boris and a majority of the cabinet are understood to be strongly opposed to drawing Bulgaria into what might become a perilous adventure.

Well-informed Fascists in Rome told the Associated Press the reports of German troop arrivals in Albania were "false." The belief prevailed in foreign circles there, however, that a new Axis offensive would be launched within a fortnight. Whether German and Italian troops would move against Greece in connection with resumption of the Italian drive against the British in northern Egypt remained a subject of conjecture.

On the other hand, Turkey's challenging declaration that "2,000,000 bayonets" will oppose any Axis attack strengthened the opinion in some Balkan quarters that the Turks were speaking with a nod from the Kremlin.

The government in Moscow, according to Sofia sources friendly to the Soviets, is willing to promise Turkey armed support if Germany and Italy should move against the Dardanelles.

The informants asserted they had been assured by "high Communists" that negotiations were under way between Moscow and Aknara and "have every chance of success."

Such a military understanding would, of course, increase the risk of a Russian conflict with the Axis—a conflict which the Soviet heretofore has tried to avoid—but Bulgarians claimed a current lack of warmth in Russo-German relations is evidence that Moscow is considering shifting position.

The Russians employed a familiar form to indicate their official reaction to Germany's thrust through the Balkans to the Black Sea, the Associated Press reported from Moscow.

Tass, the official Russian news agency, published a denial of a report carried by a Danish newspaper, Politiken, that the Soviet government was "timely informed that German troops would be sent to Rumania and that the Kremlin was informed of the aims and number of troops sent to Rumania.

"Tass is authorized to state that this report . . . does not correspond to the facts."

When Germany first acknowledged that Nazi soldiers were in Rumania, Berlin spokesmen said powers friendly to the Axis, which presumably included Germany's pact partner of 14 months, had been notified that others were to follow.

Russia became deeply interested in the Danube when last summer's acquisition of Bessarabia from Rumania put her border on that river.

In order, then, these events occurred:

Russia called new recruits to the colors.

The Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact was signed and there were some hints that Russia had little or no warning of it.

German spokesmen said the Axis pact signatories agreed on the sphere which Russia would control, but they did not say what it was, and there was a strict lack of Russian comment.

Allowing for the wishful thinking that may be behind certain reports of disaffection between Germany and Soviet Russia, the Associated Press pointed out, there have been quite independent indications that the two countries have not been confiding in each other to any great extent in recent months.

Some of these have come from Moscow itself through official denials of foreign press reports.

As early as September 6, Tass disclosed that the German Ambassador to the Kremlin had not met Josef Stalin for "'six or seven months."

Six days later the Russian vice commissar for foreign affairs Andrei Vichinsky, received Count von der Schulenberg, the German Ambassador, and protested, in effect, that Russia had been left out of Axis plans for a change in the international status of the Danube.

Japanese Pact in Making

As it stands, the new Axis pact seems to bind Japan to fight Russia if Russia "attacks" one of the other signatories but it exempts Germany from fighting Russia, should Russia "attack" Japan.

Hence Japan took the initiative, with apparent German support, in seeking a nonaggression pact with Russia, and recent indications are that Russia may well be agreeable to "locking the back door" this fashion. Diplomatic sources in London said yesterday such a pact may be signed within the next few days.

Meanwhile, though—and two days before the Axis pact was signed—the Russian army organ, Red Star, backed down on an article it had carried a few days before in which it had said that Russia was keeping hands off "the imperialistic war" for the Balkans. This, it added, was a "mistake."

Oil Control Made Absolute

Rome, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Germany has assumed control over the entire production and distribution of Rumanian oil and will fix the quotas for such nations as Greece and Turkey, the newspaper of Italian Foreign Minister Ciano said today.

The Telegrafo of Leghorn, which is controlled by Ciano, said the Nazi military activities in Rumania have denied Britain access to any of Rumania's oil output, while Greece and Turkey will be obliged to accept the quantities of oil allotted them.

"Common sense does not admit that a nation of secondary importance such as Rumania should hold an absolute monopoly and control over the only European oil. Rumania is the owner of the oil and may gain from it but at the same time must put it at the disposal of interested parties."

scored heavy bomb hits on another British cruiser and an aircraft carrier off Malta, and continued today with claims the same cripple British squadron had lost a cruiser to torpedo-carrying Italian planes. The British aircraft carrier was still able to send her planes up in opposition, however.

["Informed sources' in Rome, however, reported additional evidence of the Italians' inability to control 'Mare Nostrum' in citing information that the giant British liners Queen Mary and Mauretania had been convoyed safely through the Mediterranean, with the Queen Mary carrying 15,000 British troops.]

The Ajax action, as the admiralty told it, began at 2:30 a. m. Saturday when the Ajax, cruising barely 80 miles southeast of Sicily, sighted three of Italy's 697-ton Airone class of destroyers each with main armament of three 3.9-inch guns and fitted with four torpedo tubes.

"Ajax at once engaged and two of the Italian destroyers were sunk outright," the admiralty reported crisply.

"Shortly after this encounter, H. M. S. Ajax sighted an enemy force of one heavy cruiser and four destroyers.

"H. M. S. Ajax again engaged and succeeded in crippling one of the enemy destroyers. The remainder of the force escaped in the dark."

Then, the admiralty continued, the 8,250-ton cruiser York, believing the Ajax was in touch with "considerable enemy forces" steamed up to add her six 8-inch guns to the support.

Planes took to the sky and at dawn the destroyer which the Ajax had damaged in her second encounter was found, limping along at the end of a towline from another Italian destroyer "which had gallantly come to her assistance."

As the Ajax came up to the towing destroyer "slipped the tow and made off at high speed toward Sicily," billowing a smokescreen, the admiralty went on.

"It was then ascertained that the damaged destroyer was the 1,620-ton Artagliere, of the latest class of large Italian destroyers," the admiralty reported.

Crew Abandons Ship

"H. M. S. York soon came on the scene and the crew of the Artagliere at once began to abandon ship. Our forces allowed half an hour for the abandoning of the ship and then sank the enemy destroyer by gunfire.

"H. M. S. York dropped rafts to supplement the boats for the survivors of the Italian destroyer and a wireless message was broadcast . . . to Italian stations giving the position of the survivors.

"This was done in spite of the fact that such a signal compromised the position of the British forces. Also, the weather was fine and Sicily at no great distance. Experience at the sinking of the Italian cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni on July 19—when our rescuing destroyers were bombed by Italian aircraft—made it impossible for our ships to take any further measures for the safety of the survivors of the Italian destroyer.

"It was known, moreover, that an Italian air concentration and an Italian submarine were in the vicinity."

Not content with this, the admiralty listed three other victories:

1. Bombardment of the port of Savona, near Genoa, by a British submarine and the sinking of two armed merchant ships in the vicinity, one of them of 5,000 tons, another of 3,000.

2. Sinking of two supply ships, one of 3,000 tons, the other, 800, by other British submarines off Naples and Bengasi, Libya, respectively.

3. Successful naval bombardment of Italian troops at Sidi Barrani, Egypt.

The air ministry, in a correlary announcement, detailed heavy bombardment of Bengasi, in which two ships were reported hit directly, and barracks, main railway sidings and other objectives blasted. Italian desert troop encampments also were raided and still other bombers attacked Gura, Eritrea, with devastating results claimed.

tossed on the sea. Many stripped themselves of their clothing and jumped in naked.

Italian sailors who kept to their ship, seeing the hopelessness of their fight against the flames, waved white sheets and her captain hoisted a white flag.

The cruiser York pulled up a short distance away and signaled the Italians to abandon ship. York waited until all had complied and got their life rafts clear, then fired heavy shells into the Artigliere.

As the first correspondent accredited to the Mediterranean fleet, I was standing on the port side of the flagship and watched the proceedings through field glasses. The flaming Artigliere, burning in the distance, merged into a funnel-shaped mass resembling a Kansas tornado.

Fully six hours after the first shells were fired into the burining ship, the Ajax sent a shell into her side in a second attempt at a coup de grace. Artigliere shivered, and sent up more billows of jet black smoke.

Shortly after 9 a. m. I saw a sheet of flame spout skyward. A torpedo from the York had touched the Italian vessel's magazines.

Then she went down in a death plunge, a rainbow band of pink, light green and purple framing her in a semi-halo. As she disappeared, her red-hot plates sizzled and sent up geysers of steam.

The rainbow disappeared almost as quickly as the Artigliere, and a long spiral of white smoke spreading out like a big fluffy powder-puff, marked the spot where the vessel had been.

Cruiser York Signals Position

The cruiser York, remembering the experience of other British ships which were bombed while trying to rescue Italian seamen from the sunken Italian cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni after another British victory last July, decided to avoid a repetition of that experience.

So the York dropped large rafts into the water, supplementing those already carrying the Artigliere's seamen, and Admiral Andrew Cunningham, commander in chief of the British fleet, sent a radio signal in Italian giving the position of the survivors. A few of those left adrift from the destroyers sunk by the Ajax were picked up.

British aircraft some time later sighted three Italian cruisers and several destroyers southeast of Sicily, apparently dispatched in the hope of covering the Artigliere. The British flagship sent cruisers to contact them but the Italian vessels turned about quickly.

Four Italian Bombers Shot Down

The Italians attempted to make the British pay for their victory by showering bombs on the fleet, but the Fascist planes, diving from rain-laden clouds, missed.

Pompoms and 4-inch antiaircraft guns beat off six heavy air attacks within a few hour.

British fighter planes also scampered from the decks of aircraft carriers to engage the attackers. Their machine gunfire downed one Italian plane shadowing the fleet and two Italian bombers, wreathed in flames, plummeted into the sea.

Still another bomber was downed by antiaircraft guns and a fourth was seen fluttering toward land with one motor dead and part of its fuselage shot away.

All the British fighters returned safely to their mother ships.

The Italians, apparently sticking to a policy of avoiding contact of their main units with the British, sent out a large force of submarines, causing attack warnings to be sounded almost continuously aboard this flagship and other units of the British fleet during the last two days of the week-long sweep through the Mediterranean.

Vampire Attacks Two Italian Subs

The Australian destroyer Vampire attacked two Italian submarines with depth charges, but results were not disclosed.

Other British fleet units dropped tons of explosives into the sea in efforts to blast the enemy submersibles.

The first two Italian destroyers sunk were not immediately identified by name, but were said to be of the Partenope class, of 679 tons displacement each and having normally 94-man crews. The four ships in this class were the Partenope, Polluce, Pallade and Pleiadi, all built in 1937.

The Artigliere, a big 1,620-ton destroyer, had a normal complement of 165 men.

capital gave no information as to the severity of the raid.]

Although nothing is quite so satisfactory to the British public as explosive details of an attack on Berlin, air ministry officials made it clear tonight that most of the British bombers as well as most of its interest in this particular attack, centered on Adolf Hitler's limited supply of oil.

Even with Rumania's entire production of 6,200,000 tons a year and Soviet Russia's exportable surplus of 500,000 tons, which Germany is not at all sure of getting, the British estimate that Germany is still using far more oil than she is producing and importing.

Increased bombing of Germany's synthetic oil-plants was taken here as proof of this, and it was against these that the British bombers directed their main attacks this morning.

The four main oil plants attacked were at Stettin, capital of Pomerania on the Baltic; Bethlen Bothe, near Leipzig; Magdeburg, in the heart of Germany, and Meisburg, but the main attack was carried out against the oil plant at Politz, just outside Stettin.

The plant at Politz has an annual output capacity of more than 1,000,000 metric tons of motor fuel, and, judging by the details of the attack, all of which were issued by the air ministry in a statement, the British pressed home one of the most determined attacks of the war.

Five minutes after the first attack started direct hits were scored on large buildings near the oil plant's boiler houses, and several explosions were observed. A few minutes later fires broke out and spread rapidly through this inflammable area, and as relays of raiders came in and continued dropping fire bombs and high explosives on the target area the flames mounted to such a height that the pilots estimated the blaze could be seen in Berlin, 80 miles away.

Although antiaircraft batteries around the plant kept up a heavy barrage, the British planes dropped down to 4,000 feet before releasing their bombs. At this height, one pilot said:

"We could feel the heat coming up as though somebody just under us were using a blowtorch. The fire must have been a mile square."

Before they left to return home the pilots said they destroyed several buildings, dropped several bombs right in the center of the main target and saw two of six smokestacks topple.

The oil plant at Bohlen was raided for an hour by two squadrons, one of them from New Zealand. There again incendiary bombs were dropped.

"Bathed in bright moonlight and lit by leaping fires," the official statement said, "the great refinery stood clearly outlined and in quick succession the bombers attacked. One raiding crew saw six great explosions followed by a large blaze. As they neared, dense clouds of smoke spread over the shattered oil plant, obscuring fresh damage done by the final sorties."

From Bohlen the raiders went on to Magdeburg, 75 miles northeastward, where they set alight supplies of synthetic benzine and aviation gasoline, while the Gewerkschaft Deutsche Erdol refinery at Hanover was also set ablaze.

Capital's Gas Works Bombed

A slight haze lay over Berlin at 2 a. m. when the first British raiders penetrated inside the capital's antiaircraft defenses. Gas works in Danzigerstrasse, about three-quarters of a mile from the center of the city, and railroad lines at Lehrter railroad station and right near the Templehof Airport were the only objectives specifically named as being attacked in Berlin.

One "well-aimed" stick of heavy caliber bombs across the gas works "started several fires, which soon gained in intensity," and "a direct hit was scored with a heavy bomb on railway sidings near Lehrter Station," the British statement said. Other raiders concentrated, the official statement said, on "military objectives in the center of the city, dropping several tons of heavy caliber bombs on them," but the statement did not say what they were.

Other night raiders bombed docks at Hamburg, Emden and Den Helder, railroads and communications at Gottingen, Linden and Hanover, factories at Neuhalden, Wittenburg and Alt-Gearz, along the Baltic airports at De Kooi and Sylt, and Wesermuende, Magdeburg and Nordhausen.

States Pledge Aid to Defense Pilots of 20

The American Pilots Association, embracing port pilots of 20 seaboard States, yesterday offered its "complete cooperation" in the national defense program.

In a letter sent to President Roosevelt by John S. Delano, head of the pilots association, the organization pledged itself "ready and able to perform whatever additional service any emergency may necessitate."

The letter recalled that pilots, because of their specialized knowledge and experience were kept at their posts in the last war as "guardians of commerce," and were intrusted with secret sailing orders.

Complete Text of Wendell Willkie's Address at Buffalo

Stresses U. S. Obligation To Selectives

Rearming Program Bogs Down Under New Dealers, He Says

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 15.—Following is the prepared text of a speech tonight by Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate, in the new municipal auditorium.

Tomorrow the young men of our Nation will go to register for compulsory military service.

Later this evening I plan to talk directly over the radio to these young men. The whole Nation has a vital obligation to these young men, and I am going to talk here about that obligation.

Our obligation is two-fold.

First, we must see to it that our government, when it calls our young men into the Army, provides them with the finest equipment that any armed force possesses anywhere in the world.

This must be done in fullest quantity and with the utmost speed.

Secondly, we must see to it that these young men, when their period of military service is over, shall have the opportunity that is their right—the opportunity to a good job, to a chance to earn a living, to marry, and get ahead. This they must have in common with all other young men and women growing up in this country.

Those two objectives are the overwhelming issues of this campaign—defense and jobs.

The present Administration has—and is falling down in the fulfillment of those obligations. It has had a free hand and it has failed.

Seeks to Divert Attention

Having failed, it seeks to divert attention from its failure by talking about crisis and by manufacturing emergencies. It does this in the hope of getting a continuation of power.

Last Saturday night in Albany I gave some concrete examples of how the New Deal, and in particular its Secretary of the Treasury, have obstructed our defense efforts.

Apparently, I touched a sensitive spot, Secretary Morgenthau has responded with a defensive statement. He tries to say that the Treasury Department has not delayed the defense program. And here is his story. He says—I am quoting from his statment:

"The Treasury favored a change in the law which would give greater flexibility in writing off emergency investment, and that change has been enacted into law."

I am happy to have this assurance from the Secretary of the Treasury.

It only goes to prove the point that I am making.

For his benefit, I would like to go over the record once again. I think it is important.

The President just last Wednesday signed the new tax bill. That bill had in it the provision that the Secretary now says he favored.

I favored it, too. So far as I know, every sensible man favored it. There is no dispute about it.

It must be a good provision because the Departments of War and of the Navy asked for it. The National Defense Advisory Committee asked for it.

Why Wasn't It Passed Sooner?

We know that Congress passed it and the President signed it. It must have been a good thing. So when the Secretary of the Treasury now tells us that he favored it, that makes it unanimous.

The question I asked, and that I am still asking, is why didn't we get that provision until last Wednesday.

On April 13, 1938, Admiral Furlong, head of the Navy's Bureau of Ordnance, asked for it. We do not need to go into the technical details. Everybody is agreed.

Now that was 2½ years ago.

The Navy was on the job. What happened? Nothing.

In January, 1939, four months after Munich, the Secretary of the Navy wrote to the Secretary of the Treasury, asking early action.

Then what happened?

Why, nothing happened.

More months passed.

In the middle of 1939, John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, drafted a plan for it at the request of the War and Navy Departments.

Nothing happened.

More months passed.

On December 4, 1939, three months after the outbreak of war in Europe, a newspaperman put a question to the Secretary of the Treasury. He asked:

"As I understand it, in some of these wartime contracts a company has to build a plant that is good only for the time it takes to turn out the order. Then it is scrapped."

And here is what Secretary Morgenthau replied (I am quoting his exact words):

"Yes; but he is out of luck as far as we are concerned on that."

The Secretary then added this statement (and again I am quoting his exact words):

"If it rested with me as to whether a fellow would get a break because he had a munitions contract I am afraid he would fare rather badly."

Still Nothing Happened

Now I leave it to you. Does that look as though the Secretary of the Treasury "favored a change in the law which would give greater flexibility in writing off emergency investment?"

That was back in December, 1939.

What happened then? Nothing.

We come to July 10, 1940. The President called a White House conference, and a statement was issued saying that it had been unanimously agreed to provide for this necessary change in the tax laws.

What happened? Nothing.

On August 27, 1940, about one year after the outbreak of the European war, the President told the press that he was prevented from throwing our defense efforts into gear by a delay on the part of Congress in passing three measures. One was a four billion dollar appropriation bill. Another was the conscription bill.

And guess what the third was. It was the provision to speed up defense that we have been talking about.

So after all the delays in the Administration the third-term candidate put the blame on Congress.

This was at the end of August.

Yet in June the third-term candidate had told Congress that it should go home because there was nothing for it to do.

And so it was not until last Wednesday—two and a half years after the Navy first called attention to the need—that the President finally signed this bill with this necessary provision.

Everybody in sight now says he was for this provision.

So I am asking why it took two and a half years after the Navy's request to get action on this matter, so vital to national defense.

Yesterday, the Secretary of the Treasury told the press that the President has appointed a committee of four men to coordinate and speed up production of airplanes for defense purposes.

Needed Five Months Ago

The need for this was obvious five months ago, when the President asked for 50,000 planes.

Why did that take five months?

This morning I pointed out that, with conscription effective tomorrow, the Army has announced it can house only 400,000 men and that it will take them a year to provide adequate housing for 1,200,000 men.

I need not dwell upon the necessity of adequate housing for our men in the wintertime. You all know it, and you all know the possibilities of sickness and influenza that are involved.

No reason is supplied why, with an ample supply of building material and skilled men available in the country, so much as a year from now should be consumed.

In the fall of 1939, after the invasions of countries in Europe had commenced, the War Department submitted its estimates of its essential needs. The President cut more than half a billion dollars from the War Department's request.

The procurement of tools, clothing and essential medical supplies was delayed. The air pilot training program was cut. Among other things, work on Government arsenals was prevented.

We now find ourselves in a defenseless condition and subjected to unnecessary and prolonged delays. Why? Because this Administration is incompetent to get things done.

A wise Administration in the first place would have listened with respect to the men in the departments and whose profession was that of arms. It would have delegated authority to others and held them responsible for the result.

But even today the National Defense Advisory Commission has neither authority nor a chairman.

Underlying these immediate causes of delay, procrastination, and failure is the inability of the New Deal to recognize that our defense depends upon the same thing that our peacetime security depends on. That is to say, upon production.

Has Preached Scarcity

The New Deal has never understood how to produce or the uses of production of goods.

It has preached scarcity and defeat from the beginning.

Eight years ago the third-term candidate told us that "a mere builder of more industrial plants . . . is as likely to be a danger as a help."

Those of our people who are out of work do not regard builders of industrial plants that supply more jobs as a danger.

Those of our people who are in business and engaged in the buying and selling of goods do not regard more industrial plants designed to furnish more goods as a danger.

Those of our people who are engaged in the various professions that serve the producers and traders of the country, such as lawyers and doctors, do not regard more industrial plants producing more goods as a danger.

The farmers of our Nation, who must sell their products to others of our people, do not regard more industry, more production, more goods flowing in commerce, more jobs for people, as a danger.

I deny that in the production of goods, of jobs, of commerce, there is any danger.

In such production lies the present security and the entire future of our people.

Restrictions imposed upon that production by the New Deal must be removed.

Uncertainties of governmental policy and administrative action that smother enterprise must be removed.

That is the task we have set for ourselves, and that is the task we shall accomplish—to the end that the blessings of peace and domestic security shall once again live in this land.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FAIR EXCHANGE—Mrs. Wendell Willkie, charming wife of the Republican Presidential nominee, gave a big hug to 9-year-old Patty Cone when the latter gave her a basket of flowers. And a happier little girl could not be found in Batavia, N. Y., yesterday after the Willkie campaign train passed through en route to Buffalo

"this argument, if it has any validity, would support a fourth or fifth term, and most of all, a life term."

Willkie discussed the third term in answer to a question put to him on the second of a series of question-and-answer broadcasts over the N. B. C. Red Network.

"To Banish Racketeering"

Tonight's questions, submitted by mail by persons throughout the country, dealt particularly with subjects of interest to young people and were asked by Carl Touhey, chairman of the first voters' division of the Associated Willkie Clubs.

In other answers, the Republican Presidential candidate again assailed the third term.

He promised, if elected, to "root out" of Government service those "who may look to Moscow, Berlin or other foreign capitals for inspiration and guidance," and to "use every legitimate power of my office and every influence I can exert, to banish racketeering from every part of American life . . . including labor."

Replying to a questioner who said he "would greatly appreciate it if you would explain just what practical difference it (the third term) would make to young fellows like myself," Willkie said:

"It's the young men who should be worrying about a third term for they will live longer than we under the kind of future government that a third term would make possible. Now the only argument that can be made openly in favor of a third term is that the President in office has had more experience in the job than his opponent. This argument, if it has any validity, would support a fourth or fifth term and, most of all, a life term . . .

"No Fifth Column"

"The real reason behind the third-term movement, however, is very different. The members of the President's political family, his hangers-on, and his army of political officeholders down to the Hague and Kelly-Nash machines, find the third term their only means of staying in power . . ."

"If he is elected," another questioner asked, "will Mr. Willkie rid the Government of the hundreds of avowed and borderline Communists committed to destroy our traditional republican form of government-"

"Yes," said Willkie. "In my administration, no man or woman would hold Government office unless he or she believed in the American system of government . . . and could promise to uphold the Constitution of the United States without any mental reservation whatever. I will not tolerate disloyalty, or divided loyalty in public office. . . . there will be no Fifth Column in my administration."

Willkie said no President or other public official "should seek in any way to interferen with labor's free choice of its own representatives" but added that "labor does have the right to expect that Government will aid in protecting its from racketeers."

"One big reason why any form of racketeering exists today," he continued, "is the evil tie-up between racketeers and the dishonest political machines in our great cities. . . . one sure way to full protection for the labor movement is to smash such corruption in politics. I promise you that when I am elected President, I will not play ball with corrupt political bosses who permit or encourage racketeering.

"Wrenches in Business"

Speaking in a chilly, drizzling rain Willkie told crowds at Rochester, N. Y., today that Administration officials are experts at "throwing monkey wrenches into the business machinery."

At a half dozen street corners in factory sections, where men in overalls left their work to hear him, the Republican Presidential nominee reiterated his contention that the New Deal has failed to build an adequate defense. An example, he declared, is the lack of buildings to house men conscripted for the Army.

Willkie said that if he were President he would seek to help the problem by having a survey made of building materials and their locations, holding a conference of labor leaders to expedite construction and formulating complete plans for a building program.

"Experts at Throwing Wrenches"

He said he knew of no important New Deal official "who ever produced anything," and added that he did not mean talk. The audience laughed and he continued:

"These men are inexperienced and their minds do not operate along the lines of production. Their minds operate along the line of throwing monkey wrenches into the business machinery. In that field they are the greatest group of experts in history."

During a stop at Niagara Falls, Willkie discussed the European situation and asked his listeners to "think how different it might have been if we had not had this stagnation and we had permitted the manufacture of planes to go forward, instead of manufacturing talk."

There were some boos while he spoke.

At Batavia, N. Y., Willkie said that this election was the most important in American history, but that "the third-term candidate, violating one of our most sacred traditions, asks you to take him on faith."

"I sincerely believe," he continued, "that the President is negotiating about foreign matters that we may believe in or may not believe in. He should tell us what they are.

"I don't want to take anybody that much on faith."

WillkieCheers Sent To Registrants

"Those who stand with me desire that you should never have to fight. They know that the more quickly armaments are built, the greater is the chance for peace."

In his major Buffalo address, Willkie spoke for 15 minutes before referring to his prepared text.

The voters, Willkie declared, "should require this man (Mr. Roosevelt), before you vote for him, to define his program and to say what his policies will be.

"Ask that of my opponent, because surely all of us love this country too much to let any one man concentrate in his hands power which every individual knows is both destructive to initiative and to liberty."

Saying that the Nation has a vital, two-fold obligation to the men who register tomorrow for compulsory military service, Willkie said:

"First we must see to it that our Government, when it calls our young men into the Army, provides them with the finest equipment that any armed force possesses anywhere in the world.

"Secondly, we must see to it that these young men, when their period of military service is over, shall have the opportunity that is their right—the opportunity to get a good job, to earn a living, to marry, and get ahead."

"Real Defense Authority"

Declaring that "the present Administration has—and is falling down in the fulfillment of those obligations," Willkie said. "It has had a free hand and it has failed."

"Fourth or Fifth Term"

In his later broadcast, declaring that the only argument in favor of a third term was that a President in office has had more experience than his opponent, Willkie said that

The Political Arena

Col. William J. Donovan canceled a radio speech in which he was to have replied last night to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's address of Monday night.

JOHNSON

The Mutual Broadcasting System said Donovan was unable to speak on account of other engagements and that Col. Louis Johnson, former Assistant Secretary of War, would reply to Lindbergh instead. Johnson is to speak at 9:30 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) tonight.

Lindbergh attacked the Administration's foreign policies and called for election next month of "officials whose promises we can trust and who tell us where we are going."

C. O. P. 'Retarded' Rearmament, Says Byrnes

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, charged last night that Republican Congressmen had "retarded our progress" toward rearmament.

In a speech prepared for broadcast, he said that Republicans in Congress had voted against early defense appropriations and revision of the neutrality law to permit aid to Great Britain and had voted to delay the draft. He concluded that "the Republican candidate talks one way, his party votes the other way."

2 Students Arrested For Jeering Willkie Freed

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 15 (INS).—Two Syracuse University students arrested for jeering Wendell Willkie during a campaign speech yesterday were paroled today when they insisted they had really been jeering the Democrats whom Willkie mentioned.

"Why, I'm a Republican," one of the students told police. "What's more, I come from Maine."

Washington to Certify Communist Candidates

Olympia, Wash., Oct. 15 (AP).—The State Supreme Court, by a 6-to-3 decision, today ordered Communist Party candidates certified for the November general election ballot in the State of Washington.

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 15 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today barred candidates of the Communist Party from the November election ballot in Missouri.

Indianapolis, Oct. 15 (AP).—Indiana Communists failed today in a legal attempt to force the State and Marion County (Indianapolis) election boards to place the party's tickets on November election ballots.

Election Registration Increases in N. Y.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—A record 3,000,000-voter registration in New York City appeared probable today as the final day for qualifying rolled around with 2,500,926 already enrolled.

Party leaders were set to guessing just what the unprecedented registration would mean when the city turns out to vote in the November election. Each of the five boroughs showed substantial increases over previous highs set in 1936, when the city's total was 2,900,184.

Alarmist Propagandizing Charged in Campaign

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, national Democratic chairman, charged today that "an alleged insurance association, presumably connected with the Republican organization, has been flooding the mail with statements calculated to alarm 64,000,000 life insurance holders in the United States."

Flynn said he had received a letter from Herman A. Bayern, president of the Association of Past Presidents of Insurance Brokers and Agents which said that "certain political organizations have instituted a vicious and untruthful attack upon the system of life insurance companies, charging that under the present Administration, the financial condition of such companies has been endangered and, in consequence, the interest of beneficiaries and the holders of policies of life insurance has been endangered and undermined."

The letter added that the stability of insurance companies increased from 1926 through 1939 and that assets had grown from $15,900,000,000 in 1928 to $29,000,000,000 in 1939.

Roosevelt Rally Set for Tomorrow

The meeting has been scheduled for the purpose of organizing ward workers for an intensive campaign in the interest of the Democratic national ticket, Rosenberg said, and is the first of a series of campaign activities sponsored by the city committee. Voters in the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Wards will meet early next week.

In Doubt? Register, Draft Chiefs Advise

Doing So May Save Trouble and Won't Affect Legal Status

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Selective service headquarters yesterday issued last-minute instructions to the 16,500,000 men of military age liable to registration today.

Based on a ruling by Attorney General Jackson, national headquarters declared that all aliens in the United States within the prescribed ages, who are not specifically exempted by law by virtue of diplomatic status, must register. This ruling includes hundreds of alien seamen who may be in American ports today, it was said.

"If in doubt, register," was national headquarters advice to any men, citizens or aliens, who believe they may be exempt.

Doesn't Affect Status

"The mere act of registration cannot change your status under the law, but if you should register and fail to do so you will face the probability of punishment," a statement warned. "Ignorance of the provisions of the Selective Service Act is not a legal excuse for violation. Every person, by the provisions of the act, is deemed to have had notice of the requirements concerning registration upon proclamation by the President fixing the time for registration."

Anyone advising or aiding and abetting a man to evade is likewise subject to the full penalties of the law, it was stated. Investigations and prosecutions under the act are in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other Department of Justice agencies, unless the person involved has been indicted into military service. Then military authorities have jurisdiction and trial is by court-martial.

National headquarters also reported that the local boards which tomorrow will take over the task of classification of the 16,500,000 registrants and selections for military will all be named by tonight. Boards have not been named as yet in 10 States, recommendations from the governors concerned are on President Roosevelt's desk.

The announcement regarding aliens declared that members of foreign purchasing missions and others "not directly connected with embassies and legations" were required to register.

Exemption Granted

Faced with such an embarrasing situation, War Department and Selective Service officials took the matter up with the State Department and the Department of Justice. It was stated informally later that the Latin American officers now here as guests and the members of the purchasing missions would be exempt.

In another announcement, selective service headquarters pointed out that there will be no physical examination or questionnaire to be filled out today. Only 11 simple questions must be answered, a procedure normally taking about five minutes.

Questions asked are: (1) Name of registrant; (2) address at which he now lives and will be sure to receive his mail promptly; (3) telephone number; (4) age, including date of birth; (5) place of birth; (6) country or citizenship; (7) names of person who will always know his address; (8) relationship of that person; (9) address of that person; (10) employer's name; ((11) place of employment or business.

Torpedo Report Heard From British Ship

sonnel to their posts in evening hours.

Sixty per cent of the registrars will man the precincts in the heavier afternoon hours with only 40 per staff of 7,100 on duty in the morning.

Holmes also ordered 20 extra registrars to five large schools in the afternoon while sending 10 additional workers to the institutions in the earlier period. The schools are Wilson, Western, Coolidge High Schools, Thomson School and Jefferson Junior High School.

At the National Guard Armory, meanwhile, Gen. Cox applied finishing touches to an inspection plan whereby selective service officers will guard against unforeseen hitches in the man power inventory.

Tour of City Planned

Personally supervising the registration, the draft chief and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will tour the city at 10 a. m., visiting the 47 registration places and calling the "flying squadron" of reserve registrations to congested precincts when needed.

Gen. Cox also ordered nine staff officers to duty as inspectors in as many sections of the city. They will circulate between designated areas as follows:

Commander A. Chester Flather will supervise areas 1, 2 and 3; Maj. Sidney Morgan, areas 4, 5 and 6; Lieut. Comdr. Charles R. Hersun, areas 7, 8 and 9; Capt. Wendell S. Holmes, areas 10, 11 and 16; Capt. Tinsley Garnett, areas 13, 14 and 15; Ensign Jean de Sibour, areas 16, 17 and 18; Lieut. Albert L. Cox, jr., areas 19, 21 and 22; Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, area 20, and Edwin J. Clarke, areas 23 and 24.

To Forestall War

In a registration eve message to the men who will register tomorrow, the draft head urged wholehearted acceptance of selective service:

"This is not war but military training to forestall war. It is up to the men who register tomorrow to embrace without reservations this system and make it successful. Those who will be called into training will be carefully chosen from their neighborhoods. They should remember their responsibility—that by their service they represent the people who stay behind."

In other developments yesterday, Gen. Cox recommended 11 District men for appointment to local selection board posts left vacant by the inability of 10 appointees to serve, and a substitute for Justice David A. Pine, of District Court, as chairman of the Registrants Advisory Board.

Pine Disqualifies Himself

Justice Pine refused the important committee post "with regret" pointing out he was disqualified because of his position on the District bench before which draft controversies might later be adjudicated. Appointment of the 11 will be made by the Commissioners.

At the same time the Board of Education, through Dr. Holmes, offered space in 24 school buildings as quarters for the various local boards which go into operation tomorrow. (The locations are listed below.) They will shuffle and number registration cards for the lottery expected between October 28 and November 2.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan police, his 13 precinct captains, and six inspectors were sworn in yesterday as chief registrars. They are empowered in turn to swear in subordinate officers as registrars when needed.

Maj. Brown ordered special details of policemen to serve in the vicinity of registration places to handle traffic and prevent disorder. Members of the police school will be held in readiness to serve on the "flying squadron" of emergency registrars.

Local penal officials announced plans for registration of prisoners in local institutions upon their release. As the convicts are freed they will be registered by prison heads. Persons held in local precincts will be registered today at the station houses.

31-Year-Old Broker Who Must Register Today for Draft Thinks He Doesn't Merit 'Good Job Out of It'

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Among New York men who will register tomorrow under the selective service law is Francis Warren Pershing, only son of Gen. John J. Pershing, who commanded the R. E. F. in the World War.

PERSHING

Young Pershing, who is 31, said he was willing to do anything—including kitchen police—if and when he is called for duty.

"There's no reason in the world why I shouldn't be called up," he said. "And there certainly is no reason for me to get a good job out of it. I really don't know anything more about the business of being a soldier than the average man of draft age."

He has his own brokerage firm. His wife is the former Muriel Bache, a granddaughter of Jules S. Bache, wealthy art patron.

Plane Workers to Sign Up Today on the Job

East Farmingdale, N. Y., Oct. 15 (AP).—To maintain uninterrupted production of military aircraft at the Republic Aviation Corporation plant on selective service registration day, 1,400 employes will merely lay down their tools and sign up right on the job.

In response to a War Department request for unbroken 24-hour production, Suffolk County authorities have set up a special board of registrars to canvass the humming factory.

Another move to speed up plane production was the announcement that Republic had acquired a training school at Jericho, N. Y., to train 8,000 mechanics for jobs in their expanding plant.

Stock Exchange Head Must Register

New York, Oct. 15 (INS).—The chairman of the board of the New York Stock Exchange will register tomorrow, and if called upon for service will resign or obtain a leave of absence to serve as an Army private.

William McChesney Martin, jr., the youngest chairman the Stock Exchange has ever had, won't be 35 years old until December.

He has no dependents, his business is not solely dependent on him, and he is physically fit.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 15 (AP).—After a ceremonial council of their elders, Florida's Seminole Indians still technically at war with the United States, agreed today to register for national draft.

About 65 young bucks had announced previously that they would hide deep in the trackless Florida Everglades rather than submit to the draft.

U.S. Fights Woman Pacifist's Appeal For Citizenship

The Government yesterday urged the United States Court of Appeals to reject the naturalization plea of Rebecca Shelley, 53, who seeks citizenship but refused to take the oath to bear arms in defense of this country.

Miss Shelley was born in Hawthorn, Pa., and has lived in the United States all her life, but lost her citizenship when she married Felix Martin Rathmar, a German engineer in 1922.

A pacifist, who said last spring that if this country were Norway she would not fight the invader but would urge the Government to submit, Miss Shelley has four times been refused repatriation because of her scruples against the oath of allegiance. The most recent ruling against her was by Justice Jennings Bailey of the District Court on April 11.

Ickes Says Willkie Will Ruin NLRB

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 15 (AP).—Secretary of Interior Ickes asserted tonight that "a company union is Wendell Willkie's idea of collective bargaining under the National Labor Relations Act."

"That is the kind of aid that the workers of America will get if Mr. Willkie should ever be in a position to appoint the members of the Labor Board," Ickes said in a radio speech, "especially if the amiable Mr. Girdler and the patriotic Mr. Weir insist upon what they will undoubtedly regard as their vested right to dictate such appointments to Mr. Willkie.

Weir, he added, "is raising the money for Wendell Willkie's campaign," while Girdler, the Secretary said, was referred to thus by Willkie in a speech at New York, April 11, 1939:

"If we are patient we will see the time when men like Girdler are recognized as the true heroes of America."

Story Kennedy Will Quit Hit By Roosevelt

Envoy Returning For Consultation And Report, He Says

President Roosevelt said yesterday that Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy is returning here from London for report and consultation but that all reports that Kennedy will resign are untrue.

Reminded that Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to this country, had departed for home by clipper plane yesterday, the President said that the British envoy was making a short trip home for a simultaneous report to his own government. He added that any reports that Lord Lothian would retire likewise were untrue.

Trips home by the two diplomatic representatives brought some speculation on whether there is not under consideration some new phases of American help for Britain's fighting forces, phases of cooperation requiring consultations by the two governments with their respective ambassadors in person.

Asked at his press conference regarding Kennedy's request that another American ship be sent into the combat zone to bring home an estimated 700 Americans still in England, Mr. Roosevelt said that apparently Assistant Secretary of State Breckenridge Long was not ready for any action. State Department officials have observed that ships have been sent to England previously for that purpose and returned unfilled though Americans had been warned it would be their last such opportuinty to return on an American ship. There was said to be reluctance, under the circumstances, to risk the lives of ship personnel in another such venture.

Resignation Forecast

By Raymond Daniell

Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 15.—Joseph P. Kennedy, the American Ambassador to London, is expected to leave here for Washington flying on the clipper on Wednesday, next week.

It is extremely doubtful whether he will return as Ambassador and it is certain that he will not if he has his way about it. He has made it no secret among intimate circles that he feels he has done his bit and that he is entitled to a long peaceful holiday and to pick up his life with his family again after a long separation.

For Kennedy, his report on the state of affairs in London will probably be his last official act. Whether the same holds true for Lord Lothian, British Ambassador now returning from Washington remains to be seen, but despite the success of his mission to Washington there have been recurrent reports that he might be replaced there.

President Confers Valor Award on Boy Scout Hero

PRESIDENT REWARDS BOY SCOUT—Fourteen-year-old Don Fendler, Rye, N. Y., Boy Scout, received a gold medal yesterday from President Roosevelt for valor in utilizing Scout wood lore and keeping alive for seven days when he became lost in the Maine woods in July, 1939. Witnessing the ceremony in the White House yesterday were Ralph W. Robart (left), of Boston, past commander of the Army-Navy Legion of Valor, and Capt. Fred Kochli, of Washington, present commander

Would Join Army Today, If He Could, Declares Youngster Who Was Lost Eight Days in Big Woods of Maine

"If I were old enough, I would enlist in the Army today."

Thus, in piping boyish tones, yesterday spoke Donn Fendler, 13-year-old Rye (N. Y.) Boy Scout who survived an eight-day trek through the Maine wilderness in July, 1939, by using to the full a Scout's knowledge of nature lore.

President Roosevelt yesterday conferred on Donn the gold medal of valor of the Army and Navy Legion of Honor.

Proudly fingering the emblem, the youth emerged from the Chief Executive's office to give his message to other American boys.

Young Donn's eyes glistened when a reporter asked if he would like to join the Army. His emphatic "Yes!" was tempered only by the knowledge that regulations will force him to wait four years before the Army would accept him as a volunteer.

Tells of His Wanderings

Attired in brand new brown shoes and a new tweed suit, Donn spoke of his harrowing wanderings through the northland wilderness.

"My faith in God kept me going," young Fendler told reporters. He said the President told him he "looked pretty healthy," despite his experience.

In honor of the White House visit young Fendler had slicked down his unruly black hair. His freckled face was all smiles, but he was not visibly excited.

"He is as excited as he ever gets," Donn's mother, Mrs. Donald Fendler, said of the self-possessed youngster who kept alive on mountain berries after he became lost on the chilly summit of Maine's mile-high Mount Katahdin.

A Second-Class Scout now, young Fendler said his ambition—at least until he reaches military age—is to be an Eagle Scout. He is a freshman at a New Rochelle, N. Y., high school.

Tore His New Suit

Still exhibitnig the energy that carried him more than 35 miles through the forests to the safety of a Penobscot River sporting camp, Donn admitted yesterday that he had already ripped his new suit.

"I tore it playing yesterday," he said. The youth and his mother were visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. Leland Magill, of McLean, Va., who, with their daughter, Catherine, accompanied young Fendler to the White House for the ceremony.

The legion awards the medal annually to the "youth hero of the Nation."

Capitol Police Threatened By Army Call

The Capitol Police Force is threatened with decimation by the Selective Service Act because of the youth of the policemen, it was learned yesterday.

Officials said that between 80 and 90 per cent of the 135 men who guard the Capitol and the Senate and House office buildings are between the ages of 21 and 35 and about half of them are without dependents.

Because so many of the policemen have returned to their home districts to aid in the campaigns, the men on duty will not be able to take any extra time off for registration today, an aid to Capt. William S. Orthman said.

Many of the Capitol policemen, who are appointed wholly on a patronage basis, are graduate students at local universities and are unmarried.

Because the Metropolitan Police now have a unit of 20 uniformed men and a dozen or more plain clothes men on special detail at the Capitol, it will not be left unguarded, regardless of the extent of the military service call.

Hugh Miller Hurt Chasing Prowler

Hugh Miller, 43, head of the photographic department of The Washington Post, suffered a fractured right knee early yesterday when he stumbled over a hedge while chasing a prowler from his home, 4409 Yuma Street Northwest.

Miller was returning home from work about 2:40 a. m. and saw the prowler on his property. He gave chase and fell while leaping a high hedge fence along his side yard. He was taken to Emergency Hospital by Eighth Precinct police.

Lutherans Hear Talk By Dr. Wickey

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 15.—Dr. Gould Wickey, Washington, D. C., secretary of the United Lutheran Church of America's board of education, asserted today the church should cease to be "apologetic" about its schools, and be on the "offense" rather than the "defense."

Declaring that when men seek to "destroy liberty and democracy, they attack the church," he told the delegates to the U. L. C. A. twelfth biennial convention to be on guard against "indirect attack" in this country.

Italy, he added, subordinated" the church, Germany "subjugated it," and Russia "eliminated it."

A proposal to create a permanent commission on theological education met with considerable resistance, when recommendations in the proposal were opposed by representatives of theological seminaries, their faculty and board members.

The convention increased its tempo in order to finish up its business by tomorrow night. Louisville, Ky., appeared favored as the 1942 convention city, although New York City was bidding also for the selection.

Scheduled for consideration tomorrow is a committee report on the action of President Roosevelt in appointing a peace envoy to the Vatican.

And 1 little flip starts the engine!

Bad days ahead. But here's how Winter OIL-PLATING maintains needed lubricant in advance—for Safe Quick Starts . . .

A wit once said that the shortest space of time comes between the flash of the green light and the "toot-toot" from a crabby driver behind you. No sir-ee . . . there's a still shorter time! For in absolutely less than no time—even before you're in the car—your engine is ready-lubricated to ease the wear of cold starting, once you've changed to Conoco Germ Processed oil and Winter OIL-PLATING.

OIL-PLATING in your engine is akin to other good plating in this big way: It doesn't all drain down from where it is PLATED. And that is achieved by the magnet-like effect of a rare added substance in Germ Processed oil—that doesn't add to your cost.

Unwilling to drain down from even its highest point in the cylinders, this lasting OIL-PLATING certainly isn't waiting to be pumped up at every start. It's just simply there in any cold. So there's your lubricant for the first inching piston stroke—for preserving your engine, so as to preserve its oil economy. New Shortage In D. C. Bureau Is Revealed which involved a clerk, son of a District official. The clerk was permitted to resign after his father made good the shortage, reported to have been about $200.

Resignation of the clerk took place April 11, the same day the cashier, Miss Julia Vass, 41, said she had discovered the $2,000 shortage. Miss Vass, who is recovering in Gallinger Hospital from the effects of poison, and her assistant, Merk Dunn, were suspended by Commissioner Hazen Monday.

In appointing the board of inquiry and ordering the auditor to make the regular checks, the Commissioners took full notice of the annual report of the Comptroller General two years ago when he said that "generally the condition of affairs is such that a serious shortage may exist at any time without detection."

The board will begin its work today with a visit to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, "just to get the prospectus on what goes on here," as one member said.

Other members with Bachman on the inquiry board are Maj. Beverly Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, and Porter G. Lumpkin, chief clerk of the Department of Highways.

Recommendations are due to follow the inquiry, which may call for a complete overhauling of the District's accounting system.

District officials, who declined to have their names published, admitted "there's something wrong somewhere." This fact was pointed out in the Comptroller General's report, which said efforts of the General Accounting Office to correct the situation were countered with "passive resistance" on the part of the District government.

shooting, Lieut. Fowler reported.

Police headquarters yesterday showed considerable alarm over the shootings. Inspector B. W. Thompson, chief of detectives, assigned a squad of ace investigators to the case, but declined comment on details of the hunt.

It was explained that no bullets were recovered from the body of another colored man—Moe Steele, 23, of 12 P Street Northwest—mortally wounded September 1 at North Capitol and P Streets.

The bullets which wounded Jack Sharkey, 35, colored, of 1249 Irving Street Northwest, soon after Steele's death, are still in his body. He is in a serious condition at Freedmen's Hospital and physicians have hesitated to operate, it was reported last night.

Two Slaying in Same Section

Sharkey was shot, apparently without provocation, less than a block away from the scene of yesterday's slaying of McClaine—K Street and Rock Creek Parkway.

McClaine was crossing the temporary span over Rock Creek with Mildred Washington, 17, colored, 2223 Virginia Avenue, about 1 a. m. They were on their way home from a dance, police were told, when the sniper stepped from behind a bush and fired.

It was learned that investigators also are working on the theory that the sniper is the same who preyed on couples in parked cars through Rock Creek Park about two years ago.

LaGuardia Denies Defense Neglect

Newark, N. J., Oct. 15 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia of New York declared tonight that "anyone who says that President Roosevelt has neglected the National defense utters a deliberate misstatement."

In a speech prepared for delivery at a Roosevelt-Wallace rally of Independent voters, LaGuardia said that "everyone knows, except seemingly the utility expert of the Republican Party, that there was no real threat to this country until just about one year ago.

"And everyone knows that no President has taken as much interest in the building up of our Navy as has the present President, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

'Polio' Increasing, O'Connor Reports

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—A five-fold increase in infantile paralysis cases to date this year over the same period in 1938 was reported tonight by Basil O'Connor, president of the National Association for Infantile Paralysis.

O'Connor, accepting the B. F. Goodrich award for distinguished public service, also disclosed there had been a one-third rise in the disease in 1940 over the first ten months of 1939.

plea for the brotherhood of man, left tonight's audiences too moved and sobered momentarily to applaud the film as spontaneously as their enthusiasm warranted. They sat silent and motionless before bursting into prolonged applause and shouts of delight and approval.

In his dual role Chaplin talks for the first time in his screen career. The voice has been worth waiting for. The radio broadcast in which Chaplin first appears as Adenoid Hynkel, beloved phooey of the Kingdom of Tomania, will repay every American who has sat stupified through one of Adolf Hitler's screaming radio performances.

Incidentally, Chaplin still sports the same clipped little mustache which he wore long before Hitler came on the scene; and he wears the same kind of derby and outlandish garments in which he clowned in the good old days of silent films.

The mugging and mannerisms of Jack Oakie as Benzino Napaloni, Duce of Bacteria, will be equally appreciated by newsreel audiences who have seen another dictator, who shall be nameless here, up to his old cinematic tricks.

Both Chaplin and Oakie, as well as Paulette Goddard, who gives a beautiful portrayal of the forlorn Jewish waif, were present at tonight's premiere, along with Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., Mayor Laguardia, Postmaster General Walker, and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy.

1,000 Planes Hammer London In Single Night, Nazis Assert

Over 1,000 Tons of Explosives Dropped on British Capital in Reply To 'Senseless' Raids on Reich, They Say

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin (Wednesday), Oct. 16.—Authoritative German army circles declared early this morning that around a thousand of their airplanes carried out massive attacks against London last night, during which they dropped more than 1,000 tons of bombs on the British capital.

In explanation of this new and more intensified attack, an official communique was released which stated that since the British have not abandoned their alleged "senseless" attacks on German civilians and nonmilitary objectives within the Reich, the German air force Tuesday and on into Wednesday, carried on "heavier" attacks on military and war-vital objectives in London.

Last night, the Germans state, was a "night of horror" for residents of the British capital. Exploding bombs were said to have set fires on a tremendous scale throughout the city and the communications system of the British metropolis is thought to have been so thoroughly destroyed that the problem of feeding the city may imminently become serious.

The Germans once again this morning recalled the examples of Dunkerque and Rotterdam in a warning to the enemy.

The attacks were stated to have been carried out by Marshal Albert Kesserling's air fleet and the Germans claim that neither the British night pursuiters, their barrage balloons nor their antiaircraft fire were able, in any way, to impede their attack.

The Germans claim that their losses were practically negligible.

Torpedoed Boats Landed

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Germany apparently increased the pressure of her air assaults on Britain today, but her fliers shared the limelight with the sailors of her torpedo boat fleet.

The fast little Nazi craft, carrying the naval war right to Britain's shores, sped into the English Channel several days ago, the high command said, sank two British submarine chasers, two merchant ships and come back with 40 prisoners.

Evidence of increased intensity in the German air offensive was seen in the official announcement that by late afternoon today German warplanes had shot down 37 British planes over the London area.

[The German radio reported bombs "of all caliber" had been rained on southern England today.]

[An oil depot was reported hit, with a "huge conflagration" resulting; "devastating" raids were reported carried out at a troop camp at Dungeness; the Victoria docks in London and Turnbridge Wells, in Kent, were declared bombed and a big freighter north of Dover struck by dive bombers.]

Although the Germans kept up day and night air attacks on Britain and themselves were subjected to a British night raid on Berlin, the high command communique stressed the war at sea.

Besides citing the torpedo boat exploits, it said Nazi submarines sank four other larger merchantmen totaling about 40,000 tons, including the 11,275-ton vessel Devonshire.

The northern and western districts of the capital suffered heaviest in last night's British attacks. The Germans said a number of dwellings and a hospital were damaged, one person was killed and 12 injured.

Most British planes which penetrated to Berlin stayed high to avoid antiaircraft shells, but several defied the barrage and swept in low. Four raiders were claimed by German night chasers, favored by the bright moonlight.

The Nazis credited the British also with "especially heavy" destruction recently in the French port of Le Havre and in the Netherlands, both in Nazi-occupied territory which the British have raided persistently.

One-a-Minute Raiders Blast London Anew

1,000 Planes Rain Huge Time Bombs, Oil, Fire Missiles

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Oct. 16.—The German air force, in a one-a-minute raid, hurled a roaring assortment of fire and explosives at London last night and early today, including the biggest time-bomb ever dropped on the capital. Besides dropping the heaviest high explosive and flame bombs, the Nazis resorted to machine-gun strafing.

In a tremendous assault rivaling Monday night's mightiest attack, the raiders shuttled back and forth, their path outlined by streaks of vapor across the moon. They appeared unusually high, judging from the time they appeared until the jarring crump of their bombs detonated through the city.

1,000 Planes Used

[The United Press said the largest number of German night bombers to participate thus far in the 39-day aerial siege pounded London throughout the night, causing terrible destruction and, it was feared, a heavy toll of dead and wounded.

[Berlin dispatches said 1,000 Nazi planes had attacked London during the night, dropping more than 1,000 tons of bombs.]

Shortly before dawn the raiders let up the intense attack and left for their cross-Channel bases.

In yesterday's almost continuous fighting, the British announced 18 German planes were downed to 15 of their own, but the pilots of nine British planes were reported safe.

A huge German time-bomb, the biggest ever dropped here, fell early today near a famous building and remained unexploded along with a shower of other delayed-action bombs.

In a heavy assault upon the capital, loosed last night after day-long thrusts at the city which had been turned back six times in a furious chain of engagements here and over England's coast, big German bombers and fighter planes came over for a time at the rate of one a minute.

So clear was the sky that during a part of the night the exhaust trails left by Nazi planes could be clearly seen high aloft.

Missiles of All Sorts

Every sort of bomb—fire bombs, oil bombs, delayed action and instant explosives—was loosed upon the city.

A stick of heavy bombs struck six buildings and a number of persons were trapped in the debris.

A double stick crashed in another area, crumbling three buildings and shattering windows in a three-block radius. Flares preceded the deluge.

The Germans came in last night half an hour later than their accustomed time, and they went to work at once in the fastest action yet seen here.

The earth shuddered again and again with great explosions and it seemed that the Nazis were using bigger bombs than heretofore.

Rescue workers set to digging in the wrecked streets for possible survivors. In one instance an automobile was blown clear over a series of houses, its pieces crashing down in surrounding backyards.

In the early morning, after a brief lull, a mass night flight roared over London and the noise of the engines, exploding bombs and shells screaming up into the sky was the greatest ever heard here. The air and ground shook with mighty explosions—and still the attack increased.

School Is Hit

A number of casualties were believed to have been caused by a bomb-hit on a school.

In another London area firemen brought under control a fierce fire raging in a large store.

One salvo of bombs fell in a straight line down one side of a street, smashing two public houses. Flames leaped up in some sections.

By this time, reports of casualties already were coming in. The people settled for a night in shelters; taxicabs fled the streets.

Japan Hopeful of Signing Pact With Russia To Offset U. S. Political, Economic Pressure

By the United Press

Tokyo (Wednesday), Oct. 16.—There was no official confirmation here today of reports in London that Japan and Russia soon may sign a nonaggression treaty, but it was an open secret that such an agreement, if it could be obtained on satisfactory terms, would be most acceptable to this country.

Japanese foreign policy these days is motivated largely by a desire to offset American political and economic pressure and what some Japanese believe to be a threat of even more severe American "anti-Japanese" measures in future.

A Russo-Japanese accord would be a logical move to offset the program of the United States and to protect this country's northern flank during the coming period of "southward expansion."

It also might pave the way for that early end of the Chinese-Japanese conflict, which the Japanese so ardently desire, for Russian aid to China, in the opinion of the Japanese, has been one of the most potent factors in continued Chinese resistance.

If a Russo-Japanese nonaggression treaty is signed, most observers believed, it would follow the standard pattern of such agreements but would be implemented by a detailed understanding which would assure a preservation of the status quo in northern Asia and an extension of Russia's present sphere of influence in northwest and western China.

Axis Favors Accord

Germany and Italy, to whom Japan is bound in the three powers alliance, were believed here to be strongly in favor of a Russo-Japanese accord and to be willing to make concessions to Moscow in the Near East to further such an agreement.

The new Japanese Ambassador to Russia, Lieut. Gen. Yoshitsugu Tatekawa, now is en route to Moscow and presumably has full instructions from Foreign Minister Matsuoka. He probably will start negotiations with the Soviet foreign office next week and a result of his efforts may be known before November 1.

Agreement on the terms of a nonaggression treaty, it was pointed out, would be comparatively simple and details of a broad general accord could be left for later negotiations.

China Takes Offensive

Shanghai, Oct. 15 (AP).—A marked revival of Chinese offensive activity in Eastern China was attributed by neutral military observers here tonight to encouragement Chinese leaders have drawn from recent evidences of friction between the United States and Japan.

Considerable forces were reported attacking the Japanese on broken fronts in northern Chekiang and southern Anhwei provinces, several hundred miles behind the most advanced Japanese lines.

The Japanese also reported their men were attacking at several points. Both sides claimed successes, but neutral observers doubted that these Chinese forces, far from main bases of supplies, had sufficient strength for a sustained concerted drive.

The Japanese, explaining the renewed action on fronts where previously they had claimed complete mastery, said they were merely engaged in mopping-up operations.

In the north the Japanese announced they had started a drive Friday against 20,000 Communist troops in the Tahung Mountains of Eastern Shangsi.

Economic Aid Urged to Halt Birth Decline

Government Experts Warn U. S. Is Faced With Population Loss

By Edward Ryan

A national program of economic aid for parents in low and middle income groups to avoid a dangerous decline in America's birth rate was urged yesterday by a committee of Government experts and educators working with the National Economic and Social Planning Association.

The financial aid, their report said, should avoid a system of cash payments to large families and instead follow a comprehensive plan calling for:

A positive program of economic expansion to assure greater economic security and equality.

National provision of goods and services for family life and child development, including rent allowances for small-income families with three or more children, public medical services for mothers and children, free school lunches for all children regardless of family income, and food subsidies.

Provision of birth control information, under medical auspices, as a part of regular public health, hospital and clinic services.

Equality of opportunity, without regard to income, for medical care and education. Public provision of adequate medical care for mothers and children, said the committee, "might well be the first measure in the assumption by the whole community of the costs of child bearing and nurture."

Highest Rate in Relief Group

Among the reasons for their recommendations, the committee said, was the fact that the only white urban women who are now having enough children for permanent population replacement are those on relief. In terms of education, they reported, the only group reproducing itself is that with less than seven years of formal schooling.

The program of national economic aid for parents, the report said, would be needed to increase the birth rate in groups with superior educational and economic advantages, and to lighten the burden of population replacement for lower-income groups.

The choice for the United States, the committee said, is not between a rapidly increasing or stable population, but between a stable or decreasing population. Present trends, they said, will in a few decades bring the Nation to a period of decreasing population.

Factor in Warfare

This prospect, they said, would affect questions of military power and security, although they suggested that the population trend would be a relatively minor factor in modern warfare compared with natural resources, military organization, morale and equipment, and economic organization.

What would probably concern the public about the prospect of declining population, the committee said, were intangibles like these:

"Most Americans probably hope that their descendants may continue indefinitely to share in human experience and to contribute to the unfolding of human destiny. The more thoughtful add the wish that our institutions may be so developed that future generations of Americans may make an increasing contribution to the evolution of civilization and to the spiritual progress of mankind. This ideal does not involve any necessary preference for indefinite population increase, but it does involve an emotional interest in the maintenance of the Nation and the enrichment of the national culture.

Modern technology and social intelligence, the committee said, could make it possible for this country "to conserve natural resources effectively and to maintain a stationary population at a constantly rising standard of living."

The report was drafted by Frank Lorimer, of American University; Ellen Winston, of Meredith College, and Louise K. Kiser, population researcher, with the help of these committee members: Harold Dorn, of the U. S. Public Health Service; Frederick Osborn, Budget Bureau consultant; Conrad Taeuber, Agriculture Department; P. K. Whelpton, of the Central Statistical Board; T. J. Woofter, Farm Security Administration, and several educators. Their report, entitled "Foundations of American Population Policy," was published by Harper & Bros.

Dudley W. Bagley, chairman of North Carolina's Rural Electrification Authority, will become second assistant to the new Comptroller General, Linsay C. Warren, when the latter takes office November 1, it was learned yesterday.

Representative Warren, the Associated Press reported, announced Bagley's appointment in Washington, N. C., and said that he would be assigned to handle administrative functions in the General Accounting Office.

Bagley will take office the same day as Warren. He resigned yesterday from the North Carolina agency. A graduate of Trinity College and the University of Virginia, Bagley has long been prominent in Virginia State affairs and is a former State Senator.

Warren said Bagley's appointment was the only one he would have in the GAO other than his secretary, Mrs. Leonora B. Kelly, clerk of the commission on accounts for the last 10 years, and his stenographer, Miss Rena Harding.

U. S. Preparing to Seize Vital War Supplies; Roosevelt May Use New Power Against Axis

President Roosevelt yesterday cleared the way for the United States Government to seize machine tools and other war implements for its own use or release them to "friendly governments," notably Russia and Britain.

Using powers he signed into law six days ago, the President issued an Executive order that directs the Secretaries of War and Navy to determine whether any equipment, munitions, or machinery, tools, materials or supplies needed to make arms should be requisitioned for sale or other disposition. This "determination" is a legal step, required by law, before the implements can actually be requisitioned.

Hinting broadly that the new powers may be used in waging economic warfare against the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance as well as for national defense, the Chief Executive said that in case there is a surplus of any war materials we would let them go to a friendly power.

Russia he definitely placed in the caegory of a friendly power, though he explained that Russia's desire for release of $5,000,000 in machine tools it has ordered in the United States was not the mainspring of yesterday's action.

Negotiations between Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Russian Ambassador Constantine Oumansky for closer Soviet-U. S. understanding have been said to hinge in part, on release of these machine tools, now under the export license control system to the Soviets.

The new order looking toward requisitioning of war supplies might also be applied to make available to another customer, probably Britain, a shipment of 200 to 300 airplanes for Sweden still held here, the President indicated.

White House disclosure that no time will be lost in using these new powers of requisition topped a day that included these strides in the national defense drive:

President Roosevelt, after a confidential talk with Loring C. Christie, the Canadian Minister, revealed that $100,000 had been allocated to make borings for a power dam in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River. The disclosure followed by a day a new agreement between Canada and the United States to divert more Niagara Falls water to Canada. Power alone, and not navigation, is involved in the negotiations with Canada, the President emphasized.

As the midnight deadline approached for the recently proclaimed embargo prohibiting exports of iron and steel scrap to any nation outside this hemisphere except Britain, the State Department clamped down restrictions on Americans who want to go to the troubled Far East. Nothing but a demonstration of urgent reasons, officials said, will permit the issuance of a passport to the Far East or any place outside this hemisphere.

Eyes On Far East

Sharp interest was manifested here in press reports from Tokyo that American Ambassador Grew had been called to the Japanese Foreign Office and asked for an explanation of the United States action in calling its nationals home from the Far East. The propriety of another Government concerning itself with policies relating to American nationals was privately discussed but officials waited for their own report on the incident before commenting.

As repatriation steps quickened, President Roosevelt signed into law legislation to impose new restrictions on aliens. He affixed his signature to a new nationality code that, among other things, forbids naturalization of aliens connected with any organization, association, society or other body opposed to the United States Government and those who write, publish or advocate overthrow of the Government by force.

At his press conference, the President declared that he learned a lot when he read reports that the United States is negotiating naval base leases with Latin-American nations. Defense talks with neighboring countries go on all the time, he said.

The President denied there was any basis for recent reports that Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Staff, or Admiral James O. Richardson, commander in chief of the fleet, might be replaced in the near future.

The executive order that the President issued yesterday in a move toward requisitioning of war goods directs the Army and Navy Munitions Board to make determination whether any of the supplies should be taken over by the Government for final disposition.

Many Licenses Refused

The order was prompted, the President said, by the fact that many licenses have recently been refused for export of the many types of war materials that have been under license control since July.

Title to much of this equipment, now backing up on American shores, has already passed to foreign buyers who, however, can not receive the goods owing to denial of export licenses by the United States.

Yesterday's order smooths the way for the Government to see that the equipment gets into the hands either of defense manufacturers at home or of friendly foreign nations.

Newspaper Ads Held Most Effective

Three Washington insurance men yesterday engaged in a verbal battle with three insurance advertising executives of the Life Advertisers Association at its convention here and were appeased before firing a charge.

Both sides as well as 200 delegates, tossed bombshells into the belief that insurance and advertising do not mix, and concluded that newspaper advertising is the most effective type.

The District men were H. Cochran Fisher, of Aetna Life; Harold Krafft, of Provident Mutual, and Russell Shelk, of Reliance Life. Their opponents in the scheduled debate were Fred Fisher, of Lincoln National; Harry V. Wade, of American United, and Arthur Sisson, of State Mutual.

Earlier, William D. Kennedy, of the J. Walter Thompson Co., told advertising executives are playing an increasingly important role in the world, including the insurance business. "It has been through advertising that Hitler has made a nation of slaves feel that they have all the prerogatives of free men," he asserted.

"The world's leading propagandist is just now putting on an interesting and rather convincing demonstration of the pwoer of his art," he said.

Speakers at the convention's morning session included A. H. Thiemann, of the New York Life; S. S. Larmon, of Young & Rubicam; Thomas C. Boushall, president of the Morris Plan Bank in Richmond, Va., and Kennedy.

Kenneth R. Miller, of the Atlantic Life Insurance Co., general chairman of the annual meeting, presided over the afternoon debate.

The annual dinner-dance of the association was held last night in the Washington Hotel, convention headquarters.

Today's program will include talks by Anthony R. Gould, of the United States News; George A. Harper, of Bankers Life Insurance Co.; Harry T. Wright, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters; William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Nelson A. White, of the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co.

The convention will close this afternoon with presentation of awards for leading exhibits of life-insurance advertising, and installation of new officers.

U-Boat Activity At Lowest Point Since May 6 Week

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Oct. 15.—The activity of German submarines in the Atlantic has subsided as suddenly as it rose two weeks ago, to give merchant shipping the blackest week of the war.

Official figures released today by the admiralty show that mercantile losses for the week which ended October 6 totaled ten ships of 31,094 tons and were the lowest since the week which ended May 6.

This was little more than half the average weekly loss of 57,000 tons in the previous 56 weeks of hostilities.

The total included seven British ships of 24,943 tons, two allied ships at 2,464 tons and one neutral vessel of 3,687 tons.

Navy Commissions New Air Base

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 15 (AP).—To the strains of the national anthem, detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines today saluted the raising of the United States flag over the $25,000,000 Southeastern air station at brief commissioning services.

Strategically situated not far from the mouth of the St. Johns River, the big air station, first of the Navy's new major bases to be commissioned in the national defense program, became an operating unit more than six months ahead of schedule.

Pair 3,000 Miles Apart Are Wed

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 15 (AP).—Miss Margaret Leger, 22-year-old teacher, was married today to the sweetheart of her days at Kansas State College, Charles O'Neal, jr.—with the groom 3,000 miles away, in the interior of Venezuela.

Charles W. Cusic, the bride's uncle, served as proxy for O'Neal.

The proxy wedding was decided upon to avoid a wait of 45 days before marriage when Miss Leger joins her 25-year-old fiance at Charguaramas, where he works as a civil engineer. There's a 45-day residence requirement in Venezuelan law.

Episcopalians Debate Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Oct. 15.—A report which posed the question whether the church has failed in the present international crisis touched off spirited debate today at the Protestant Episcopal Triennial Convention.

"Why has the church failed in the present crisis?" asked the Rev. Howard W. Diller, of Pottsville, Pa., reading from the preamble of a report showing the church property has increased by $50,000,000 in value and local parish support by $20,000,000 since 1937.

"We can't accept the principle that the church has failed," shouted Dr. G. C. Story, of Chicago, from the floor.

"Can the church be condemned for the crisis?" asked another delegate.

"We didn't prevent it," replied Mr. Diller.

"Nobody asked us to," rejoined Dr. Story.

"We shouldn't wait to be asked," replied Mr. Diller.

"How," asked Dr. Story, "can the Church dictate to a pagan civilization, a civilization that has turned its back upon the Church and Christian principles?"

The debate ended in a vote which sent the report back to committee for rewording of the opening statement.

The Church's house of bishops voted for church affiliation with the World Council of Churches, an action which also needs approval by the house of deputies to become effective. The convention already has voted to affiliate with the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America after having considered the proposal for 20 years.

D. C. Medical Society Told Of Heart Surgery's Gains

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

The delicate procedure to be followed in mending a human heart that has been torn by a bullet or punctured by an icepick was explained yesterday to a large group of surgeons at the District Medical Society's annual scientific assembly.

Fifteen years ago heart surgery was a rarity, but today it can be undertaken with confidence, said Dr. Isaac Alexander Bigger, professor of surgery at the Medical College of Virginia, Richmond.

Stressing the vital importance of proper diagnosis, Dr. Bigger asserted that too many heart wounds are still going unrecognized. Where there is even the slightest possibility, in an emergency case, that the patient's heart has been damaged, the doctor should look for distended veins in the neck—a telltale sign—and make a fluoroscopic examination of the chest, the speaker declared.

He reported on 26 cases on which he operated in the last ten years. All were victims of violence, knives or bullets being the weapons involved in most instances. In each instance the heart was exposed to the surgeon's knife and suture needle. Only 9 of the 26 died.

Dr. Bigger emphasized that hospital interns and resident physicians especially should cultivate a high index of suspicion in chest-wound cases. This for the reason that such cases occur most often in night brawls and when the patient is brought to the hospital the visiting staff surgeon is not so likely to be available.

The Richmond surgeon was one of ten visiting and local doctors who addressed the assembly's scientific sessions at the Hotel Mayflower yesterday. They included Dr. Richard Schatzki and Dr. T. Duckett Jones, of Harvard University; Dr. Raymond Hussey, University of Maryland; Dr. Helen B. Taussig, Johns Hopkins University, and Dr. Edward F. Bland, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

Addressing the opening luncheon session of the three-day assembly, Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, Army Surgeon General, outlined problems confronting the Medical Corps in the national defense program. Not the least of these problems, he said, is the matter of medical personnel—where will it come from?

"In the organized reserves are about 15,000 doctors, but not all of these will be available for service," Gen. Magee said. "Some will be found not to be physically fit, others can't be spared from their civilian duties. After those who are taken have had their year's training, who will replace them? I don't know the answer."

The Army, consisting of 165,000 men a year and a half ago, is being raised to a strength of 1,400,000, which means that personnel—doctors, nurses, technicians, orderlies, etc.—must be increased proportionately, as well as hospital beds, equipment and other facilities, the surgeon general asserted.

He commended the part which the American Medical Association is playing in the preparedness program, particularly for the census which it is taking of the Nation's doctors.

RIVIERA BAND GOES ROAMING. Pete Macias and his Lounge Riviera band roved from Hotel 2400 the other eve for the first time in a year. They went out to the Kenwood Country Club to play for the party of the Young Republicans of Montgomery County. Walter Johnson, now a Republican candidate for Congress, was the guest of honor. Maestro Pete wrote new lyrics to "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" in compliment to the "Big Train" . . . Young Joe Cochran and his orchestra subbed for the Macias band in Riviera—and smartly. There's a unit to watch . . . Though Riviera's new addition doubled the size of the spot, Greeter Stone still has to turn customers away.

A new Washington high in luxury dinner tariffs has been struck by the Old New Orleans. Dinners in the handsome second floor "Gone With the Wind" room, begin at $3.50. But you get wine.

"LOTUS' FALL FROLICS" is not only the biggest revue ever presented at a Washington night club, it's bright with fine singing and lovely girls, enlivened by novel production numbers. The Naval Cadets' glee club numbers are musically rich, including Kern and Romberg melodies, and climax with a blast of collegiate songs. The Cadets team up with the dancers in a Gay 90's bit with the lasses flaunting enormous bustles, the lads decorated with amazing moustaches and beards.

THE ROMANY ROOM opened last night with a crowd that packed it to the rafters. Enthusiasm foamed over the brilliant and unusual dance music of Al Spieldock, a floor show of glistening talent and the artful and colorful decorative effects of this newest after-dark spot.

NEWCOMERS IN METRONOME. Lionel Rand, composer of the hit tune, "Let There Be Love," has just joined Grant Thompson's Metronome Room band as pianist. He's the former assistant director of the St. Louis Symphony, and musical director of the International Casino . . . Al Brydof, a star pupil of Charles Magnante, whom musicians call the "world's greatest accordionist," has also joined the Thompson orchestra.

Mrs. Eleanor Norton, the stunning lady who's currently emceeing the Shoreham floor revue, was once a "Floradora" chorus lass, also played in "The Merry Widow."

FACES IN PLACES. Representative C. Arthur Anderson in Mayfair, evidently relaxing from his duties on the Military Affairs Committee. (How anyone can relax while listening to "Mousey" Garner is beyond us) . . . Bob Bark, of the New York Daily Mirror, being greeted with big smiles by the entire Anchor Room staff. We had to leave, doggone it, right while Mr. Bark was in the middle of an exotic story about how Vera Stretz escaped the electric chair . . . Singer Linda Carroll, of the King Cole Room, tea dancing in the Mayflower Lounge with Don Kettston. Here we also saw Mrs. L. A. Ritz, of Switzerland, who has the prettiest hair-do in town.

NEPTUNE'S "PARAMOUNTIES" always get their audience. Right now they're turning out gorgeous arrangements of "Crosstown," "My Echo, My Shadow and Me" and "Call of the Canyon." Customers come in for a cocktail, are so magicked that they stay for hours.

ABOUT THE GIRLS. Every man who goes to the Troika seems to be smitten by Mimi Kellerman. A 22-carat siren, this Mimi . . . That sleek coiffure worn by the Cosmos Room's cunning Ginny Braynard is called a "George Washington peruke" . . . Carmela Lazari, of the Hi Hate, has one of the most finely trained voices in the city. Be sure to hear her carol "The Heart That's Free" . . . Jane Marlow, the New Bavarian's delightful violinist, is of Russian and English descent . . . Maxine Moore, the exquisitely pretty canary in the Pall Mall Room, was the singing star of the old Le Paradis back in the so-called "dry" days . . . Lawrence Andrini, of the Cafe Caprice, toured Australia with Anna May Wong in a show called "Highlights of Hollywood" . . . The Rainbow Room's Milton Davis played the organ in the Palace Theater when cinemas were silent.

BARNEE,
of the Shoreham, topflight and popular maestro

Burt's Trans-Lux, has "arrived" so definitely that she's due for some good spots on the radio.

CASINO ROYAL will break out a bright new floor show tonight with New York dancers and novelty performers in the line-up. The Lindsay Girls will also present new production numbers, but retain the roguish skit in which they crown the ringsiders with big straw hats.

BACKGROUNDS. Pianist Hildreth Harrison, of the Robin Hood, used to play on the S. S. Britannic . . . Jean Cathon, the effervescent boulevardier of La Salle Versailles, was at Montreal's Chez Maurice all last summer . . . For all that he looks so youthful, Marty Rubin, of Del Rio's clowning emcee, Don Rice, will present a spang new floor show tomorrow. Comedy dancers Ames and Arnette will debut, harmonica star Jimmie La Kore and singer Penny Pepper will have new acts.

NIGHTINGALE PARTIES. Rodd Raffell's Nightingale orchestra are great ones for giving parties in their own organization. Last week there was a soiree in honor of Andy Andrusia, who's leaving the band. Tomorrow there'll be a birthday party for Trombonist Oliver Wilson.

ELEGANT VICTUALS—AND PLENTY OF 'EM. Chefs at River Bend have been toiling all day in preparation for that "Piggy Party" tonight. For one little dollar you can eat all evening, drink all the beer you can hold. The trays of eats and drinks just keep on coming up . . . Generous in size, savory in flavor are those "pop" priced dinners at the Harrington Tavern . . . And the seafood specials at Dick's Grill will give you that comfortable, well-upholstered feeling.

Absentee Voters Told of Deadline

Connecticut, Delaware and New York voters were warned by the District Democratic Committee yesterday that Saturday is the closing date for registration in those States.

New Yorkers who live in cities or towns with populations greater than 5,000 must register Friday or Saturday in person. Residents of smaller towns may apply for their absentee ballots by mail. Delaware voters must appear before the election officers Saturday if they have not registered yet for absentee ballots.

In Connecticut voters must be examined in person, but the date varies in different cities with Saturday the State deadline.

Jackson Opens War On Voting Frauds

Milligan, Pendergast Nemesis, Appointed To Lead Campaign

By the Associated Press

The Department of Justice announced a Nation-wide drive against election law violations yesterday under the direction of Maurice M. Milligan, who successfully prosecuted the Kansas City vote fraud cases and the income tax charges against Tom Pendergast.

Milligan, 55-year-old Federal district attorney for western Missouri, was described by Attorney General Jackson as the man who "broke the control of the Pendergast machine in Kansas City." He held a preliminary conference with Department of Justice officials and district attorneys from three States yesterday, a few hours after his temporary appointment as special assistant to the Attorney General was announced.

Present were Attorney General Jackson, Charles Stewart Lynch, United States attorney for Delaware; Gerald A. Gleeson, district attorney for eastern Pennsylvania; William F. Smith, district attorney for New Jersey, and other Justice Department officials.

Scope Is Wide

In announcing Milligan's appointment, Jackson said an investigation would be conducted in every State or city where complaints indicated a law violation. He said "a great number of complaints" had been received "charging wholesale registration irregularities and conspiracies to violate the Corrupt Practice Act, the civil rights statutes, the Hatch Act and other Federal laws."

"The charges," he added, "include receiving contributions and making expenditures in excess of the limits provided in the Hatch Act, padded registration lists, destruction of records, Hatch Act violations of a criminal nature, striking off of registration lists and various alleged conspiracies to violate Federal statutes."

Jackson said his new assistant would be given "the utmost latitude," and would have "at his disposal all the resources of the Department of Justice."

Milligan won national recognition through his prosecution of the Kansas City vote fraud cases. All 63 defendants who stood trial were convicted, 36 others pleaded guilty and 189 threw themselves on the mercy of the court.

Milligan resigned as Federal district attorney last April to seek the Democratic Senatorial nomination, but was defeated by Senator Truman, the incumbent. With the indorsement of Senator Truman and Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, he was reappointed district attorney last month.

Dykstra Wins Confirmation As Draft Chief

Senate Action Takes Place 19 Hours Before Registration Begins

With an even dozen members in the chamber, the Senate yesterday unanimously confirmed the nomination of Clarence A. Dykstra as director of selective service.

The Senate action was taken just 19 hours before registration for the Nation's first peacetime selective service begins.

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, who had blocked Dykstra's confirmation Monday, raised no objection yesterday, and Dykstra was confirmed five minutes after the Senate convened.

However, Senator Holt did take the floor to say that he had delayed Senate action a day because "I'm getting tired of sitting here and having the Senate jump when the President snaps his fingers."

A "lame duck" who was defeated in the West Virginia primaries, Senator Holt suggested that the President could have avoided the necessity for haste by submitting the nomination earlier than this week.

Majority Leader Barkley retorted that so many names were under consideration that some time was required to sift through them. If the appointment had been made in a hurry, Senator Barkley said, it might not have been such a good one.

Terming this an "excellent" appointment, the majority leader congratulated the Senate on confirmation. The session ended just 21 minutes after noon, when the Senate adjourned until tomorrow. The House, which, like the Senate, is believed not to have a quorum of its membership in town, also will hold a brief session tomorrow.

Dykstra has been granted leave of absence from the University of Wisconsin, of which he is president. Born in Cleveland 57 years ago, Dykstra was city manager of Cincinnati for seven years before he went to Wisconsin in 1937.

Yount, Fickel Will Command New Air Units

Scowden Ordered Here From School to Head Subsistence Division

The Army yesterday assigned two assistant chiefs of Air Corps to important new air commands set up under the reorganization and expansion program.

Maj. Gen. Barton K. Yount, now in England as a special observer of air defense strategy, will command the Panama Canal Air Force, while Maj. Gen. Jacob E. Fickel was ordered to Riverside, Calif., as commander of the Western Air District, one of four such districts recently established. Both are now assigned to the War Department.

At the same time Brig. Gen. Frank F. Scowden, commandant of the Quartermaster Corps School in Philadelphia, was ordered here as chief of the subsistence division of the Office of the Quartermaster General.

In another shift, Brig. Gen. John Magruder, chief of the intelligence branch of the Military Intelligence Division of the War Department General Staff, was ordered to duty at Madison Barracks, N. Y., and Brig. Gen. Walter H. Frank was transferred from Hawaii to duty with the General Headquarters Air Force at New Orleans.

Mexico Denies U. S. Has Agreed To Huge Rail Loan

Official denial was made yesterday of a printed report that this country has agreed to lend Mexico $50,000,000 for rehabilitation of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec railway and port facilities at Puerta Mexico and Salina Cruz.

Saying that International News Service had attributed announcement of the loan to Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador, the Mexican Embassy issued a statement saying:

"After telephonic consultation with Mexico City, the charge d'Affaires of Mexico is authorized to deny emphatically that such a statement has ever been made. The Ambassador of Mexico has not given to the press any statement referring to the matter in question. Furthermore, the story is entirely untrue."

Churchill Refuses to List Aims In Victory Until 'It Is Won'

By James B. Reston.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 15.—Prime Minister Churchill addressing Commons during an air raid, rejected demands from all sides for a new statement of government peace aims and reminded the members that Britain was fighting, among other things, to survive.

Stubbornly refusing to be drawn out by his questioners and showing a touch of displeasure at this revival of a campaign that was over, Churchill said he thought this was no time to "go beyond the very carefully considered general statement which had already been made."

He indicated that since this was a subject on which there was a great difference of opinion it would be a great mistake to take the chance of dividing the country, taking its eyes off the central job of winning the war.

This same argument was given on several occasions by the Chamberlain government, but the members of the House, despite Churchill's eloquence and the sirens outside, showed clearly, nevertheless, that they were not satisfied.

"In Order to Survive"

The Laborite Member of Parliament, S. S. Silverman, for example, asked Churchill to bear in mind that the longer a purely negative attitude toward this matter was maintained the greater the impression grows that Britain is fighting merely to maintain the status quo.

"I do not think," Churchill replied, "anyone has the opinion we are fighting this war merely to maintain the status quo, but that we are, among other things, fighting it in order to survive."

When Britain's capacity to survive is more generally recognized throughout the world, Churchill said, "then we will be in a good position to take a further view of what we will do with victory when it is won."

May Be Forced to State Aims

This campaign for a statement of war and peace aims is not the same as the academic discussions which took place during the quiescent period after the outbreak of this war. Many of the best thinkers in this country are seriously concerned about the success of Germany's plans for the reorganization of Europe among the small nations of the continent.

Many people here believe that despite all the cries for freedom among the many different continental nationalities and factions there is a deep growing feeling all over Europe that the Continent needs a master. The small nations of Europe might prefer a British master but they do not know what Britain intends to do, whereas Germany has made her position very clear.

In addition to this argument which is put forward mainly by liberal circles, many people want the Government to say what it is prepared to do about social reconstruction in this country when the war is over. Labor members in the cabinet are themselves pressing for this, and sooner or later Churchill probably will be forced to give some kind of assurance that the people are going through these air raids toward an improved and better Britain.

Every night the German bombers plaster the little people here, this demand for a specific statement on their eventual reward grows. Already the government has been forced to appoint a cabinet committee to study the question.

FCC Authorizes Radiotelephone To Bay Islands

By the Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday authorized the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to establish a radiotelephone service from Crisfield, Md., to Tangier and Smith Islands.

The islands are in Chesapeake Bay about 13 miles from shore. The Chesapeake & Potomac Co. will provide a circuit between Crisfield and each of the islands, connection being made at Crisfield with the general telephone system.

During the past few winters, the FCC said, the islands had become isolated due to ice and winter conditions and it had been necessary to organize relief parties to provide food for the inhabitants. During the winter of 1939-40 the company established emergency radio facilities.

The FCC said there were about 800 persons on Smith Island and 1,400 on Tangier Island.

Partial Bombseye View Of London Is on Way

Warners to Distribute 'London Can Take It;' Prolific Ben Hecht Turns Out Museum Piece; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IN "LONDON CAN TAKE IT," America soon will be privileged to view a film which will provide at least a sketchy notion of what the Nazi air blitzkrieg over the British capital really is like.

BELL.

Produced by the English General Post Office Film Unit, with Quentin Reynolds, of Collier's Weekly, as commentator, the picture is now on its way to America for distribution throughout this country, Canada and Latin America through the Warner Brothers exchanges. It is being bruited about—on the strength of the British Ministry of Information's preview of the film—that while Mr. Reynolds provides the feeling of the drama inherent in the nightly raids, the pictures themselves are a masterpiece of understatement. They depict the routine life of London both before and after the air raid sirens sound.

When the warning wails, a roar is heard overhead and the booming of the guns begins—all true to life, according to report, but as a vignette only. The deafening sound of a bomb with its cataclysmic aftermath of noise and destruction is heard only once. That ought to be enough. Now and again the London broadcasts keep the microphone open to the thunder of bombing and antiaircraft fire and it makes an icicle out of your spine.

Anyhow, they named the film appropriately.

When "The Westerner" comes to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow, Washingtonians will see not only one of the best of the "Westerns," but a picture which embodies an abbreviated biography of one of the most picturesque characters of the old West. Yesterday afternoon's preview demonstrated that while Walter Brennan, as Judge Roy Bean, may not "steal" the picture from Gary Cooper, cast in the title role, nobody can take credit away from him for running a dead heat with the star for top honors. And in Doris Davenport, Sam Goldwyn's latest discovery, you will find a young actress who vividly recalls the Marjorie Rambeau who played with her then husband, Willard Mack, in so many of his plays on local stages 'way back when. More of all this in tomorrow's review.

The script of "Angles Over Broadway," Columbia Pictures' new Ben Hecht production, starring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., has been accepted by the Museum of Modern Arts of New York for its film library. Both the original story and motion picture script were written by the indefatigable Hecht. Considered by the museum officials as an outstanding example of beautiful, effective and compelling dialogue, this script will be permanently filed for use by students of motion picture writing for study purposes. This would seem to be no time to exclaim, "What the Hecht!"

There comes word, too, from Oscar Doob, a fellow-Hoosier who dedicates his talents to the glorification of Loew's, Inc., that a copy of Ethel Vance's "Escape" is being mailed this desk in the hope that it will find a place in our "Loew's Academy Award Library"—as if we had such a thing! The discerniing Doob hasn't seen the M-G-M pitcurization of the novel as yet, but already is beginning to envision it among the 1940 Academy Award winners. He might be right, at that. A postscript to his note adds, "The critics here are ecstatic over 'The Long Voyage Home'"—as if we didn't know.

It will be quite a bill that will be ushered in at RKO-Keith's Theater by personal appearances of Charles Laughton on Friday. In addition to "They Knew What They Wanted," in which Mr. Laughton and Carole Lombard are costarred, the program will include the March of Time's latest release, "Britain's R. A. F." Plenty of action and real-life drama is packed into this new issue, which shows how the Royal Air Force has been built up within the past year to play its vital part in the defense of England and offense against the Axis powers.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 15 (INS).—Good morning! Well, come next Saturday we will be on our way. Robert Stack, Sabu, Ilona Massey, Brenda Joyce, Binnie Barnes, Mike Frankovich, William Orr and yours truly are going on personals.

PARSONS

We open at Loew's State in New York October 24, after a few stopovers. Sabu is all agog over the premiere of "The Thief of Bagdad" Thursday evening and tickets are going like hot cakes. When the 16-year-old lad returns from his P. A. tour with me, he will start work on Kipling's "Jungle Boy."

Ilona Massey, our beautiful vocalist, also has a date with Alexander Korda to be starred in "New Wine." Binnie Barnes is working night and day on "This Thing Called Love," for Columbia, and Harry Cohn is cooperating with us and so is Al Hall, the director, so Binnie can leave Saturday. Mike Frankovich, radio sports commentator, appears with his bride. Brenda Joyce, Twentieth Century-Fox's pride and joy (and what a darling she is), has big things in store for her. Robert Stack, popular juvenile, goes into the Deanna Durbin picture, "Nice Girl," for Joe Pasternak, when he comes home. William Orr, for whom Warners predict big things on the screen, is one of our leading lights.

Lots of chit chat over the new contract that Gregory La Cava is about to sign with Universal as a producer-director. I will say for Universal they are really doing big things and if they get La Cava, in addition to Joe Pasternak, well, they will have some top moives. Gregory's first is to be an original, "Unfinished Business," and whom do you think they are negotiating with for the lead in the La Cava opus—Irene Dunne, no less, and since Irene is a smart gal and knows the value of a La Cava picture, it will be news, indeed, if she doesn't put her name on the dotted line.

Jackie Cooper, who went back on the M-G-M lot after an absence of four years to make "Gallant Sons," is going to stay at his old alma mater for a while. He will have his most grown-up role to date in "Ziegfeld Girl," as the wise-cracking brother of Lana Turner and the boy friend of Judy Garland.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Martha Raye's New York heartbeat is Terry Rose—no relation to Dave ose, her former husband; Reginald Gardiner and Mary Parker are really becoming an item; the Darryl Zanucks had a small dinner party honoring the Sidney Kents and what fun to reminisce with Sidney and Bob Kane over the old days. They were both at Paramount and I was on the Morning Telegraph. We have all been friends for more years than any of us want to tell; Virginia Bruce, who is completely well again, looked very pretty; Kay Francis, aided by Sally Eilers, had a most amusing political discussion.

Contrary to reports, Johnny Maschio and Connie Moore are not building a nursery. It is only a bar with a nursery motif; George Stone and Mrs. Ernest Truex a Beverly Tropics twosome; the whole town is turning out for Jesse Lasky's play, "Quiet Please," at the Biltmore and it will be a gala evening; Venita Varden Oakie is in the hospital, but she's so much better she played hostess to Cupid Ainsworth at a birthday shindig; Mickey Rooney is playing 36 holes of golf daily to keep down his weight—of all things; that was Ken Murray with Pat Morison at the Emerald Lodge; the Lyle Talbot-Linda Brent engagement is all off; Virginia Field's heart is in England with Richard Greene, but she has been seeing a few shows with Arthur Drummet.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 15.

Even though I spent only 12 hours in San Francisco—for the premiere of "They Knew What They Wanted," which was a smash hit, and so was Charles Laughton's appearance—I feel as though I'd had a blood transfusion. What a city! Such people! They talk about Southern hospitality—give me San Francisco. And after the picture opening, I looked in for a moment on the Junior League Ball. How those gals worked!

HOPPER

"Third Finger, Left Hand" is a silly with lots of laughs. Hard to believe Myrna Loy as a career woman. She assumes a husband to keep the boss from making passes at her, and when she goes into a "Sadie Thompson" act at Niagara Falls, it's the surprise of the picture. She does it beautifully. The title is a little confusing, but if you're a Loy fan—and who isn't?—you'll love this one.

Carole Lombard, Bob Montgomery and Gene Raymond were inspecting the parachute machine from which Carole and Gene are supposed to jump in "Mr. and Mrs. Smith." Director Alfred Hitchcock got in the contraption himself and jumped, then said to Gene, "See? If it's strong enough to hold me, it should hold you, too." Gene answered, "Yeah? Well, I'm more afraid of it now than ever, since you weakened it!"

It was 90 in the shade at Republic while they were shooting "Melody Ranch." "What a studio!" snorted Jimmy Durante. "Such favoritism! A dressing room for one actor because he's temperamental—but WE gotta sit in the sun." Jimmy was pointing at Champion, Gene Autry's horse, who was calmly munching oats in his cool trailer-home.

And Julie Duncan, a fine rider, out-walks a horse in Republic's "Texas Terror," but Ann Pennington, famous for her dimpled knees, rides a horse all through the picture. Ain't that Hollywood for you?

It looks like John Carroll's long anticipated break would come in Edgar Selwyn's "The Adventures of Pierre" which Edgar will produce from his original play, "Pierre of the Plains." If John does it, he'll sing, too.

Nine o'Clock Set as Curfew By Movie Gals

Hollywood's night life and stag line took a terrific beating last week when eight of the town's prettiest younger actresses formed an organization to be known as the "Nine O'Clock Club," with a view to getting ahead in pictures by dint of hard work and study rather than social contacts.

Rules laid down by the founders of the strange club include an order that all girls must be in their homes by 9 p. m., excepting Saturday, when curfew is at 10 p. m.; at least two hours must be devoted to dramatic study each evening; dates are permitted only on Saturdays, and night clubs can be visited only on New Year's Eve and members' birthdays, with 1 a. m. curfew.

Invite Others

Invitations have been extended to young actresses on other studio lots by the president of the organization, Wanda McKay, known as the most beautiful air line hostess in America before Paramount decided she ought to be in pictures and placed her under contract.

Plans for the odd "get ahead" club were formulated on the set of Paramount's "I Want a Divorce," in which Miss McKay has a featured role. Other members of the club are Lillian Cornell, Virginia Dale, Betty McLaughlin, Jean Phillips, Ruth Rogers, Kay Stewart, and Carol Adams, all Paramount contract players and extremely comely.

Fines will be imposed for infractions of the rules. Members will check up on each other by telephone nightly at 9 o'clock.

New York, Oct. 15.

F. D. R.: Bill Knudsen, who is being claimed by the Republicans, made a $500 bet that you'll win . . . AMERICAN WOOLEN CO.: The Administration soon will announce a woolen deal now being negotiated with Great Britain— a deal which will assure this country of adequate supplies, no matter what happens . . . HELEN HAYES: Kaufman & Hart must pay the cast of their new show, "George Washington Slept Here," full salaries during the delay of the show's opening—a delay which was necessitated by the death of Berton Churchill, who had one of the feature roles. Equity ruled that Churchill's death is not "an act of God" . . . CLIFTON FADIMAN: After two years of coaxing, Herbert Bayard Swope will appear on "Information Please," October 22.

LYONS

HEDY LAMARR: David Niven, who left one of the most promising careers in Hollywood to join his regiment in England, took a squadron of soldiers through the midlands, practicing night maneuvers. When they returned, the fatigued soldiers seemed disconsolate . . . Niven succeeded in restoring their spirits by addressing them this way: "Look, men—I know all of you are making splendid sacrifices. I know that loneliness reaches you at night, when you start thinking of your loved ones, and the girls at home. But our cause is so great, we all must make these sacrifices. If you men think you're giving up a great deal, I'd like to remind you of something I'm sacrificing too—for instance: Monday night, dinner with Paulette Goddard. Tuesday, Rosalind Russell. Wednesday, Hedy Lamarr. Thursday, Ann Sheridan. Friday, Ginger Rogers, etc., etc."

COUNT RENE DE CHAMBRUN: Pierre Cot, the former French Air Minister whom you attacked in a speech before the Overseas Press Club last week—a speech in which you said that the breakdown of the French air force was the cause of defeat—is in this country now, a refugee from the Vichy government . . . JOE MARTIN: Paul V. McNutt will turn on the heat, in a series of speeches around the country, starting this week . . . JACK OAKIE: If the American public indicates a liking for "The Dictator," Charlie Chaplin will revive his silent movie, "The Gold Rush," merely adding some musical background.

GEORGE GALLUP: Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., entered Willkie territory recently, when he went up to Bar Harbor, Me. It was purely a social visit—to visit his mother-in-law. Young Franklin arrived, wearing a Roosevelt button . . . Mrs. duPont noticed that button and asked him to remove it . . . "Okay, I'll take it off," Roosevelt agreed, "if you take down the Willkie signs."

GEORGE RAFT: The "Mack Gray" who purchased all those racing horses in the sale at Saratoga was "Kiter" Gray, your bodyguard. Gray, however, wasn't buying the horses for himself. Tom Taggart, the Indiana sportsman, was putting up the money—and allowing Mack to bid for the horses in his name . . . AL CAPONE: W. H. Stevenson, editor-in-chief of Britain's Ministry of Information, has a new name for the antiaircraft guns used in the defense of London. He refers to them as "Chicago pianos." . . . MAYOR LaGUARDIA: Charles Evans Hughes, jr., was listed among your Fusion supporters who refused to follow your lead in endorsing the President. But Oscar Ewing, Hughes' law partner, is Roosevelt's Eastern campaign manager.

MRS. OSCAR LEVANT: Congratulations . . . Incidentally, Baron de Rothschild was at the hospital, visiting his daughter, who also was having a baby. "I hear you make jokes," the Baron told Oscar, "so come in and talk to my daughter." . . . After Oscar learned that you and your daughter were doing well, he phoned some of his friends. He hadn't slept in 40 hours, his hair was disheveled, and he needed a shave . . . "At last," he told them, "I look like Oscar Levant."

JIM FARLEY: This is the real story behind Harold Ickes leaving for a Northwest speaking tour, and returning when he discovered that his speaking engagements had been canceled. Ickes was scheduled to make an address in Oregon—where the Democratic leaders objected. "If I can't make that Oregon speech," Ickes threatened, "I won't make any at all." A naive subordinate, therefore, canceled all the speeches—taking Ickes at his word . . . PAUL ROBESON: John LaTouche, who wrote the now-famous "Ballad for Americans" while he was on WPA, is reluctant about announcing his forthcoming marriage. LaTouche is embarrassed, because the young lady is the daughter of a rich Hollywood film executive.

The Little Houses a Classic In Pagnol's 'The Baker's Wife'

By Richard L. Coe.

"THE BAKER'S WIFE." Marcel Pagnol picturization of an incident in a novel by Jean Giono, starring Raimu, Ginette Declerc, Charles Moulin, Robert Vattier, Robert Bassac, Charpin, Maximilienne, Maupi, Delmont, Dullac, Odette Roger, Alida Rouffe, Castan, Mme. Merle, and Charbley. Adaptation and dialogue by M. Pagnol. English subtitles by John Erskine and music by Vincent Scotto. Previewed Saturday morning, October 11. At the Little Theater.

Funny as it is, "The Baker's Wife" is an essentially human film, an adventure in mortal foibles that is as surely universal as its locale is definitely southern France. Internationally praised by such figures as Albert Einstein and Marlene Dietrich, Dorothy Thompson and Walter Winchell, the French film was presented in Washington for the first time last night at the Little Theater as a benefit for the British-American Ambulance Corps. This morning it begins its regular run, an engegement which will draw many film-lovers back for repeat sessions with one of the rare films of our day.

"The subject is man's need of bread. The Greeks had a word for human beings—'they called them 'bread eaters,' in contrast to the gods, who lived on ambrosia. All the characters in this film live on bread."

Thus goes John Erskine's mood setting forceword to "The Baker's Wife," descriptive and witty. The baker's wife hungered for romance —which she found in her husband's capactity to forgive. His hunger was the devotion of an artist to his profession," he continues.

In a village much like the one Giono captured for his "Harvest," we watch the daily bickerings of those humans who see each other daily and gradually become critical of one another. There are the priest and the pedagogue with their learned shades of variance. There are the peasants who do not speak to each other. There are the parched, proper women of the village.

Into this town comes a new baker. And with him such a wife. Ah! Why have they come from where he is appreciated to this unknowing spot? It is the wife's delicate health which drove them here, but soon the baker will show what a prize the villagers have in their new Boulanger. Ah, such bread!

The marquis, a wordly man whose goods are few but whose "nieces" are too many for the priest, comes with his shepherd to place his order for the new baker's bread. He's eminently pleased with the new baker, obviously an artist of his ministry. "Twice weekly," the marquis tells the baker, "you will give my order to this shepherd who will take the bread to my chateau."

What a handsome fellow is this shepherd! He captivates the young wife at first glance and a few days later they've flown the village.

Worst of all, the baker can no longer bake. He very nearly sets fire to his bed. There is only stale bread in the village. The priest cannot entertain the marquis. Differences must be forgotten. Enemies become friends. On the shoulders of the schoolmaster, the priest goes to the island where the lovers are hiding, the handsome shepherd swims away in shame, the wife pines for her faithful husband and, a sadder but wiser woman goes back to light the oven fire.

Raimu's baker, so ugly yet so compassionately a human being, is an unforgettable portrayal, while Chapin's marquis, Ginette Leclerc's wife, Charles Moulin's shepherd and Robert Vattier's priest are very nearly as memorable portraits as the baker himself. John Erskine's delectable English subtitles are masterpieces of succinctness, though even if the film had only the camera to tell it, it would remain as richly enjoyable. Which is, after all, the true triumph of the visual art we call the moving picture.

Model Tells Court Pilot Beat Her at Hotel -

Arabella Bunny Hartley, blonde New York photographers' model, drew a "packed house" in Police Court yesterday as she took the witness stand to describe a midnight beating in an uptown hotel, allegedly inflicted by Clifford Ziegeraeset, handsome airplane pilot and her former fiance.

Zieger, through Attorney Dorsey K. Offutt, pleaded not guilty to assault charges and demanded a jury trial. But Judge Hobart Newman insisted on hearing the facts before setting bond. Miss Hartley, clad in a chic gray ensemble, nervously took the stand and related:

On October 9 she had a date at 9:30 p. m. in her Shoreham suite with Zieger, but she was delayed and arrived an hour late.

Argued Several Hours

"He accused me of all kinds of things—other men, accepting gifts and staying out late," she told the judge.

For several hours they argued, Miss Hartley said, and then Zieger started to beat her. He finally used a coat hanger, she added.

At this point, Attorney Offutt asked to see her bruises. She tried to show him one under her hair, but Offutt said he couldn't see it.

Miss Hartley explained the reputed beating took place two weeks ago and the bruises "probably won't show now."

Dr. Harry Hurtt, 1765 R street, said he examined the woman at another local hotel the day after her reported beating. He said she was black and blue about the arms, right thigh and leg and there was a "lump behind her right ear."

Zieger Held in $500 Bond

Judge Newman denied a request from Offutt to have Miss Hurley submit to a second medical examination "unless she wants to cooperate to that extent."

Miss Hartley declined to "cooperate."

Zieger was held in $500 bond pending a jury trial, the date of which was not set.

Miss Hartley flew here from New York yesterday after withdrawing charges against a former husband whom she had accused of stealing her automobile.

"I didn't know the charges were so serious and I was excited," she told Judge Newman.

"Do you intend to follow through and prosecute this man," the judge asked, indicating Zieger.

No Steel Shortages

There is no danger of "bottlenecks" in the steel industry, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute. The producing capacity of the industry is estimated at 83,000,000 net tons of ingots per year, while the annual average domestic consumption of steel ingots during the last ten years has been below 40,000,000 net tons.

Since steel requirements of the defense program are not expected to exceed 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 net tons there is a tremendous margin for expansion. Even if the 1929 per capita peak of steel consumption were to be reached for non-military purposes, the president of the institute points out, the present steel capacity would still be equal to the demand.

These estimates testify to the very inadequate utilization of the existing producing equipment of the steel industry. A similar conclusion may be drawn from a recent study of the Brookings Institution on "Productivity, Wages and National Income."

The large capital outlays of recent years for plants and equipment have greatly increased the productivity of the industry, that is, the amount produced per man per hour. But during recent years, while productivity has continued to rise, actual output has declined. The American steel industry faces increased demand for its products with its efficiency at the highest level it has ever reached.

Aid For Free Elections

Attorney General Jackson's special unit to investigate election fraud charges has an opportunity to render a genuine national service. Heretofore the job of uncovering corrupt political practices has fallen chiefly upon the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. Obviously it cannot investigate all the complaints of illegal campaign methods and interference with free elections.

One statute alone would justify the creation of this new prosecuting unit. The Hatch Act is enforced by the Civil Service Commission as to employes within the merit system. But the real problem of applying that act in the case of non-civil-service employes, who are most susceptible to political influences, is left to the Attorney General and the heads of agencies in which such employes work.

So if the Hatch Act is to be properly enforced alert prosecutors in the Department of Justice must be constantly available to investigate complaints and make independent inquiries. Probably that will be the largest assignment of Mr. Jackson's new prosecuting unit. But the Department of Justice is also receiving numerous complaints of illegal campaign contributions, destruction of records, padding of registration lists and conspiracy to violate the Corrupt Practices Act. All these require prompt and impartial attention, and some cases will doubtless warrant prosecution.

United States Attorney Maurice M. Milligan takes over this assignment with an excellent background of experience. It was Mr. Milligan who prosecuted Thomas J. Pendergast and several members of his Kansas City machine now behind prison bars. His zeal in uprooting political corruption will be particularly appropriate in the position to which he has been assigned.

It is well to recognize, however, that this excellent recommendation is offset, in some measure, by the fact that Mr. Milligan was himself recently a candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Missouri. Political interests will have to be rigidly subordinated to his responsibility as a prosecutor if the new unit under his control is to fulfil its high promise.

Registration Day

To a whole generation of young men this may prove the most fateful day of all their lives. Unless there is some sudden dispersal of those dangers, which, in the phrase of President Roosevelt, are now darkening the world, the destinies of millions of young and not so young men will be profoundly altered for better or for worse.

Certainly that was true of the generation of young Americans who on that bright June morning of 1917 registered themselves for the draft and, shortly thereafter, were drawn far out of the normal orbits of their lives. A profound alteration in habits, psychology and social outlook are an inevitable concomitant of large-scale military training, particularly if that training is followed by actual combat.

These facts are far more clearly understood by the young men who will register today than they were by the young men of 1917. Many of that generation had an idealized concept of war which is now, fortunately, quite absent. This was due perhaps to the fact that in 1917 the realities of the previous great war in which this Nation had been engaged had been softened by the distance of more than half a century.

For the young men of today the first World War is no further away than the youth of their own parents. Moreover, today's generation has come to maturity in a world in which wars and revolutions have been well-nigh continuous, and so has a greater awareness of how small the world has grown.

Thus the young men of 1940 have watched the approach of Registration Day with a greater understanding of its solemnity and importance. The high emotional atmosphere which pervaded the registration of 1917 is absent now. We hear no wild outcries now against resisters and slackers. Instead we find on all sides a disposition to concede that even pacifists have a right to their views and conscientious objectors to their scruples. We understand better than in 1917 that democracy is not to be saved by abandoning it.

In part this restraint may be due to the fact that we are not now at war and to the belief that, with prudent strengthening of our defenses, war may be avoided. Nevertheless, the sober, willing and wholly unvainglorious spirit in which youth is accepting its tremendous responsibility is of happy augury for the Nation. Surely what is begun in such spirit will not be badly ended.

Balkan Jockeying

The enigmatic silence which Russia has maintained on the subject of the German military occupation of Rumania has now been broken by two denials published by the Soviet press.

The first is a repudiation of reports that Russia is participating in discussions with Turkey, Yugoslavia and Greece regarding the formation of a four-power bloc to oppose further German-Italian penetration into the Balkans. The other is a denial that Russia was informed by Germany of the latter's intention to dispatch troops to Rumania.

Of these official statements the former is, at the moment, of greater importance. None of the still independent Balkan nations is by itself in a position to hold back for more than a brief period the onward march of the German legions now pouring into Rumania. In some quarters the total German army of occupation in that Balkan kingdom is already said to number 120,000 men. Only with the backing of Russia could the Balkan countries face this threat with any hope of putting up effective resistance.

It is unlikely that Hitler and Mussolini would care to get tangled up with the Red army at a moment when neither appears to be making real progress in overcoming the resistance of Great Britain. On the other hand, it is doubtful whether Russia has any desire to become involved in a war at this time. The fact that the Russian advance into Rumania stopped with the seizure of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, and that the recent entry of German troops into Rumania went unchallenged, proves the reluctance of the Kremlin to take a positive stand.

There are indications, however, that Russia's patience is being sorely tried. The denial of any foreknowledge of the German military move into Rumania points in that direction. Certainly Russia could not view with equanimity the extension of German control over the Dardanelles and the Bosporus, which would place the gateway between Russia and the Mediterranean in German hands.

In this particular the resistance of both Turkey and Yugoslavia to Axis domination can be interpreted as an indirect but significant manifestation of Russian concern. Neither the Turks nor the Yugoslavs have thus far given any indication that they are prepared to lie down and let the Axis walk over them, as Rumania has done.

Unfair To Washington

The Voluntary Retirement Act for Police and Firemen, just signed by President Roosevelt, is commendable in so far as it extends benefits to District personnel. But it establishes a precedent that may prove to be a yoke on the necks of local taxpayers. For it also extends pension privileges to the White House Secret Service aides.

The President signed the bill, it is understood, in the face of an adverse report from the District Commissioners. His interest in the future of the men assigned to guard him is understandable, but it is regrettable that the District should be forced to pay this Federal expense under protest.

Police and firemen's retirement pensions, before the enactment of this latest measure, cost taxpayers $1,000,000 a year. The 3½ per cent pay deductions account for only about $200,000, or one-sixth, of the annual pension outlay of $1,200,000. The cost, moreover, has been growing steadily in recent years.

Consequently, the inclusion of a Federal agency in this local pension system actually means that District taxpayers are being saddled with five-sixths of the additional expense. The extra cost of pensions for a handful of Secret Service men is comparatively small. But the precedent thus established is grossly unfair to the District.

The amendment including Secret Service aides was attached to the bill on the Senate floor upon motion of Majority Leader Barkley, who made no effort to justify it. The matter was never submitted to the Senate District Committee, although several hearings and conferences were held in an effort to overcome the Commissioners' objections to the original House bill.

The District Retirement Fund Act previously had been amended to include the White House and the United States Park Police. With the latest addition as a precedent, what is to prevent a future Congress from saddling the District with the cost of pensioning Federal building guards or even the Capitol Police?

On The Home Front

It is an ironic fact that the exigencies of national defense should bring to light more clearly than in ordinary times the prevalence of curable diseases. Now that physical fitness has become a military necessity for many of our young men, even Washington may redouble its efforts to reduce its disgraceful losses in health and life from tuberculosis.

The District Tuberculosis Association is once more planning to donate $500 of its funds, the greater part of which derive from the sale of Christmas Seals, for a free X-ray service among high school athletes in their fourth year. This particular group has been chosen for the service because of its susceptibility to T. B. Similar examinations will be available to all high school and college students, however, for a nominal fee.

Last year the association's work brought striking results. Twelve positive cases of tuberculosis were discovered in the schools. The victims were hospitalized, thus giving them every opportunity to fight the plague, while at the same time reducing the risk to the community. The association also made progress in its rehabilitation and educational work; it conducted a health camp for children, contributed to medical research and aided a Negro tuberculosis institute.

The community has good reason to cooperate in this work and extend its scope whenever that is feasible.

Another Victim

For the fifth time in six weeks a sniper has shot an innocent person in this city. Four of these victims were mortally wounded and the fifth is still fighting for his life. There is no telling when or where the criminal may take his next toll, as the Washington police have been apparently unable to establish his identity or any motive for the crimes.

The problem is undoubtedly a difficult one for the police. They have had very few clews to guide their investigation. But the fact remains that for six weeks citizens have been outraged by these miscellaneous slayings and the guardians of the law have been unable to solve those crimes or stop their recurrence.

It is high time that more drastic action be taken to protect the lives of District citizens from such attacks. More police are certainly needed. But while Congress is waking up to that fact the present force should bend every effort toward eliminating the threat of sudden death from the sidewalks and streets of the Capital City.

On Changing Horses

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The adolescent quality of Mr. Willkie's oratory was never more conspicuously displayed than in his version, rapidly becoming historic, of the old metaphor of changing horses in midstream.

"Who got us into the middle of the stream?" roared Mr. Willkie in his recent Detroit speech. "I am sure the man who got us there is not the man to get us out." His audience, whose ears seemed to communicate with some other organ than the brain, here went wild with hysterical applause.

Let us pause a moment to consider. The stream is evidently the rushing torrent of current events. No one can be blamed for getting us into it; the mere fact of our being alive today is responsible. The American public is personified as thr rider; the present Administration is the horse; Mr. Willkie's administration is the second horse. Now where does "the man who got us into the middle of the stream" come in? If Mr. Roosevelt with his aides is the horse, only such magic as Mr. Willkie possesses could change them suddenly into the man riding the horse (which now seems to have become the American public), into the middle of this dangerous stream.

Is an individual whose thinking is in such a muddled condition qualified to take charge of the Government of our great country, with its many complicated and delicate problems? M. ANDERSON.
2609 Fulton St., Berkeley, Calif.

New Dealism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just why such stanch Democrats as Al Smith, James Farley, Vice President Garner and many others have broken with the New Deal and the present Democratic Party, I do not know.

I only know my own personal reasons for supporting Willkie, and cannot vouch for another's.

Some will tell you they are for Willkie because the New Deal has failed to solve unemployment, though millions of dollars have been spent for that purpose. Others are for Willkie because under the New Deal business has been put in a straightjacket. Others because the encouragement the New Deal has given to subversive activities. Others because of the meddling of the New Deal into the affairs of the farmer.

To my mind the most important issue in this campaign is the fact that our American system of government is in danger not merely from Fascism, Nazlism, or Communism but because of New Dealism as well.

Four more years of New Dealism will mean the end of Democracy and Americanism.

"New Order"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of October 10 appeared Mr. Walter Lippmann's article "On a New Order in the World" which has gripped me. I wish to express my appreciation of this timely message.

There is, I believe, a crying need for us all to become better acquainted with the great and noble principles upon which our country stands. May God bless America in her efforts to extend the "New Order" in the world, for the benefit of all mankind.

No New Dealer

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lots of puzzled voters can't figure out whether F. D. R. is on the level with them, or is just another politician with an extraordinary build-up. It is this class that should study his action in selecting a man to head the draft.

In this country are trained Army officers who, from experience in the World War, know all its angles, the proper persons to take charge of it because of such qualifications. Instead we now hear that some Western college head who never had a day's experience with draft administration is to get the job.

Maybe it is smart politics to give the $10,000 a year job to someone that has to start from scratch to learn it, but how is the United States served by such appointment in times like this, when time is so precious?

Take the case of Frank Hague, as another incident. His record is known to every informed politico, private business and public, and it cannot stand the light of honest inquiry. Has that inquiry ever been made? Well, former Attorney General Murphy started an honest one—but he got sidetracked and the investigation stopped.

Club Stands 100%

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been called to a letter recently published in The Post written by Elizabeth Butler Howry, in which she disagrees with Dorothy Thompson in her indorsement of President Roosevelt.

Miss Howry signs her name and adds that she is a former corresponding secretary Woman's National Democratic Club. As the president of the Woman's National Democratic Club I wish to state that in this campaign as always the club supports the Democratic candidate 100 per cent

MRS. D. TUCKER BROWN.
President.
Washington, Oct. 14.

Understatement?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am undecided whether C. A. P.'s letter in The Post of October 9, reproving Mr. Willkie for implying that the President is a liar, was written in a spirit of subtle humor or was intended to be serious.

If the latter, I recommend that C. A. P. read some of Mr. Roosevelt's 1932 campaign speeches, noting particularly his denunciation of bureaucracy, excess taxation, uneconomic Government spending and mounting public debt. Has not C. A. P. seen the constant encroachment on State's rights, the reduction of Congress and the Supreme Court to a rubber-stamp status, the latter body because it refused to condone Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal violation of the Constitution?

Will C. A. P. remember that the President took a sacred oath to preserve and defend that Constitution? It would seem, therefore, that if Mr Willkie erred, it was on the commendable side of understatement.

ALBERT W. BROWN.
Washington, Oct. 12.

Unpolitical?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt's pretended "military inspection tour" is a travesty on the American people; a fraud on the Government. The national budget does not provide campaign expense for any official seeking election. This is a public steal on the taxpayers of the Nation.

Here are some facts on his "inspection tour" in Pittsburgh—he spent exactly 37 minutes inspection in Pittsburgh; he entered the Munhall works at 12:01 p. m. and departed at 12:22 p. m.; he entered the Mesta works at 12:33 p. m. and left at 12:49 p. m. Since when has Mr. Roosevelt become an authority on the working of steel mills? At Johnstown, Senator Guffey, the candidate for Senator, boarded the Presidential train with his Democratic political machine and they took charge of the "inspection" until it left the State of Pennsylvania. Mr. Roosevelt's trip was a political success because it enabled him to restore party peace.

Any man who will resort to such practice of trickery, deceit, duplicity and insincerity is not fit to occupy the White House. We need a man for our Presidency of the highest character; of unquestioned integrity; a man of ideals who will maintain public life on a high plane and uphold political morality. Any other man weakens the moral fiber of the Nation and destroys the faith and confidence of the people—such a man is a greater menace to American democracy than is Hitler.

Our American democracy cannot survive if the people lose faith and confidence in their leader.

W. J. KNAPP, JR.
Sisterville, W. Va., Oct. 12.

The Hullabaloo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I for one cannot see what all the hullabaloo is about. It was plainly stated by Willkie himself in his opening speech that he was a German-American. Mr. Willkie was not ashamed to come out in the open about his ancestry then. But now the same fact used against him in an ill-advised campaign is a "slur." It is noteworthy in passing that the tendency to hyphenate their nationality pertains more to Germans than to any other nationals. Who ever met a British-American or a French-American?

As for the remark attributed to Adolph Hitler about the Negro race, this can be substantiated by a perusal of his works. This boils the alleged "smear" down to one item—facts. So what's all the shouting about Mr. Willkie?

MILLER HARGROVE.
Washington, Oct. 14.

Supports Miss Thompson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be gratuitous to offer defense of Miss Thompson, as she is amply qualified to defend her position relating to any subject at issue, and do it with her own composition and without assistance.

There is perhaps no doubt that under normal conditions Miss Thompson would be found supporting Mr. Willkie for the Presidency. That Miss Thompson possesses a keen and analytical mind, capable of penetrations beyond the ken of the average of her critics, goes without saying. That her patriotic loyalty to the best interests of the United States overwhelms party partisanship, is well demonstrated by the fairly unanswerable factual conclusions set forth in her announcement, and which were chronicled with such cool and sincere deliberation as to favorably impress any citizen possessing an open mind.

Tito The Tarantula

Our Rule, of course, did not permit us to keep pets, lest our affections be diverted from God, their proper object, to one of His creatures, be it even so lowly as a canary or a mouse. But it was a very lonely life, and I began to feel a reprehensible longing for some sort of affection, even from a mouse.

One afternoon, during recreation, I was walking disconsolately about the grounds, thinking about some of the pets I had had in my unregenerate past. There had been Old Nell, the horse on whom I had learned to ride, and Leo the Lamb, and Achilles the Goldfish, who had died a delirious and happy death through the introduction of some gin into his bowl, and a host of others. Then I saw a tarantula scurrying busily across the path before me. He was a handsome tarantula, with lively black legs and an entrancing reddish sheen about his hair.

I squatted down and extended a finger across the tarantula's path. He paused a moment and then walked resolutely across my finger. I next placed my open hand, palm up, before him, and the tarantula climbed into my hand, tickling me with his hairy feet as he set them down.

He was obviously a very friendly tarantula, with a charming disposition and an engaging nature. My hungry heart went out to him at once. What an admirable companion he would make! But, my conscience asked, a pet? Isn't that against the Rule?

It was not for nothing that I had begun the study of Moral Theology. What was the intention of the lawgiver, I asked myself, when he prohibited the keeping of pets? Why, obviously, he meant to exclude the keeping of dogs, and cats, and birds, and the like. Would the lawgiver have considered a tarantula a pet? Of course not, I readily replied. Who ever heard of keeping a tarantula as a pet?

I put the tarantula into the pocket of my cassock and hurried to my room. I had a big glass jar in which tobacco had formerly been, and in that jar I installed the tarantula. I christened him Tito, which seems of all names to be the most appropriate for a friendly tarantula, and gave him a little saucer of water to drink from.

With fatal ease I developed a consuming affection for Tito. His character, upon closer knowledge and more intimate acquaintance, was even more amiable than I had at first believed. He loved to walk about on my desk while I studied, and he manifested a particular interest in Greek texts, so that even now when I see a page of Greek I picture Tito strolling sagely across it. I put some dirt in the bottom of his jar, and there he built a home, lining it with silk spun from his body.

Tito was not a voracious eater, and it was easy for me to keep his modest wants satisfied. He asked for nothing more than an occasional grub or beetle or other small insect, and I had no difficulty in laying in an ample supply of these during my daily walks. They had to be brought to him alive, of course, or otherwise he would ignore them. As soon as they began to move, however, Tito would pounce on them and sink his two sharp teeth into them and drain all the succulent juices from their body, manifesting great relish all the while. Both Tito and I looked forward immensely to his feeding periods.

All this, needless to say, had escaped the notice of my superiors, for I had not thought it necessary to advertise the fact that I had a companion in my lonely cell. One day, however, while Tito and I were poring over some Aeschines, there was a knock at the door, and the prefect came in. The consumption of electrical current had passed all bounds, it appeared, and Father Phelan suspected that some seminarians were supplementing the inadequate heating of their rooms by the use of electric heating devices. There was a possibility, too, that some of the more abandoned characters among us might have percolators or heating plates, since an odor suspiciously like that of coffee had been noticed about the corridors occasionally. I love coffee.

After we had exchanged the customary salutations, Father Phelan asked, "Do you have any electrical appliances in your room, Mr. Appleby?"

"Yes, Father," I answered, "there is the electric light overhead, and a lamp on my desk."

"Of course," said Father Phelan, impatiently. "I'm not blind. Is there anything else of an electric nature you'd be having?"

"Yes, Father."

"And what is it?"

"An electric percolator, Father."

"Give it me." Then Father Phelan rested his hand and the confiscated percolator on my desk while he gave me a brief homily on the heinousness of my crime. I hung my head in shame, and my eye fell upon my dear friend and companion, Tito.

As soon as Tito saw the percolator and Father Phelan's hand, he left his Greek text and came over to investigate as fast as his eight legs would carry him. He came closer and closer, and I was transfixed with horror.

Tito came up to the plump white hand, touched it lightly with a feeler, and then climbed boldly up on it.

I didn't really mind being confined to grounds for three months and deprived of dessert for six weeks. I don't like sweets, and during the Thursday afternoons when my fellows were taking their weekly walks outside the grounds I contrived to read 15 volumes of Pastor's "Lives of the Popes." But it took me a long time to accustom myself to the loss of Tito.

JOHN T. APPLEBY.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Buffalo, Oct. 15.

CURTISS-WRIGHT Corporation, of Buffalo, are turning out seven planes a day in a plant which has probably mastered the problems of mass production as well as any in the country—or, for that matter, in the world. The management is modest in this connection, pointing out that factories all over the country are rapidly mastering the problem, but that since Curtiss-Wright is building exclusively pursuit planes, in the case of which the units are smaller, it is possible to turn them out more rapidly than bombers, which involve other problems.

The entire production at this moment is for Britain. Only one model is being produced, in conformity with the principle of quatity production. It is the famous R. P. 40, which on export becomes the "Hawk 81" and in England is called "The Tomhawk." It is shipped in only two boxes, the wings in one and the fuselage-armor-plated body, engine and everything except the guns, gas and oil—in the other. Each plane can be assembled to take to the air in a day after arrival. These planes have a speed of 360 miles an hour, are noted for their maneuverability and are strong enough, as the chief engineer explained to this nontechnical-minded columnist, to support eight elephants on the wings. Half an hour later he corrected himself and said they could support nine elephants; the extra elephant had recently been added by improvements overlooked in the first statement.

WHILE THIS model is being produced for immediate delivery to Britain—included in which are uncompleted French contracts taken over by the British—the plant's designers are making slight changes in it to meet requirements specified by the United States Army. This model will take another two months to perfect and will then be put into production, in place of the present model, without any interruption in rate of production. Indeed, the plant expects very shortly to be turning out eight a day. The new planes will be speedier and will have other unspecified improvements.

This enormous mass production plant presents a different aspect from that of an automobile factory using the assembly belt system. Here there is no belt, but it is possible to follow the production of a plane from the raw stock flowing through the punching presses to the final crating job for export, on a series of benches to which the planes are transferred by truck, one step of the production being completed on each bench.

According to the chief engineer, the main problem in mass production has been the education of designers to production problems. Whereas in Europe, outside of Germany, designers were not familiar with the shops and the shops had to adapt themselves to the designers, here as in Germany, the designers are making blueprints to conform to the possibilities of mass production from the outset. Curtiss-Wright acknowledge having learned much from automotive engineers with whom they have consulted closely.

The belt system is not adaptable at the present stage for airplane production because it is necessary to make more careful tests: it is not possible entirely to eliminate hand work, and much riveting has to be done in a fixed jig, impossible on a moving assembly line. Nevertheless, the engineers say an assembly line may one day be possible for even more rapid production, but this will involve intricate and expensive tooling processes.

The problems of a plant like Curtiss-Wright relate chiefly to personnel—skilled labor—and the procurement of materials. Basic materials—aluminum alloy sheet stock, forgings of aluminum and steel—require a substantial length of time to procure because there is a demand for them not only by competing airplane factories but from the automotive industry engaged in the manufacture of Army trucks and tanks. Curtiss-Wright are satisfied that the Defense Commission is doing an excellent job in working for the most constructive allocation of materials. Some firms, they think, may have been ordering in excess of their needs.

The Curtiss-Wright management thinks it likely that there may be a curtailing under Government direction of materials to industries not essential to defense, but expect cooperation by the industries on an over-all program of allocation. This firm is working at present on a five-day week, but is using its capacity in materials.

THE PROBLEM of skilled mechanics is not proving so difficult as feared. Under an apprenticeship system, carried out by both local vocational schools and a supplement to them conducted by the plant itself, boys between the ages of 17 and 24 are being perfected by four weeks' training in the operation of a single process. The management think that this is socially undesirable, "since a worker should have more than one string to his bow," but believe that the development of further skills can be carried on in the factory and extended in vocational schools once the present crisis owing to the shortage has been bridged.

They vigorously disclaim that that there is any difficulty in training the average youth and in substantiation of this say that out of 700 students enrolled in their vocational school only 13 have had to be dropped for ineptitude or any other reason. So great is the demand for workers that the vocational schools are open 24 hours, three shifts a day.

So great is the attraction of the aeronautical industry for American youth that the social composition of the ranks of the least skilled is representative of nearly every grade of home. Two boys who stood opposite each other on a riveting job engaged in the following conversation: "Where do you come from?" "Southport, Mass. Ever hear of it?" "Sure, I went to school there. St. Mark's." "Gee! You went to St. Mark's? What are you doing here?" "I had to have a job, didn't I? I thought I'd like this sort of thing. Start at the bottom and work up." "That's what I thought. I went to St. Mark's, too. I went every morning, carrying the milk from my father's farm."

IN ANSWER to the question, "Do you believe that the present effort is as great as possible?" I got the answer, "I think it is first-rate. Everything is being done that is reasonably possible. If, however, it were necessary to do the unreasonably essential, that could be accomplished—even what is usually called the impossible. It is all a question of the allocation of energy."

THIS PLANT is quite serene on the matter of industrial sabotage. Like all defense industries, the plant is carefully guarded. Many Germans are employed. "But," said one of the managers, with humor, "our German workers, who are loyal to this country anyhow, know that if anything goes wrong they will be the first to be suspected. Therefore they watch themselves and one another." "Besides," he added with a grin, "for every German-American there's a Polish-American, and they are 200 per cent loyal."

The engineers and technicians of this industry are completely convinced, on the basis of a wide knowledge of the technical equipment and problems of other European countries, that in the field of industrial defense this country, both as to rationality and spirit of labor, can match any power in the world. In fact, a visit to the Curtiss-Wright plant gives one a nice, comfortable feeling of security.

Political Chivalry

Women In Politics

CERTAIN SIGNS are appearing that the Republicans are fomenting a revolt against women in politics.

Wendell Willkie declared a few days ago that the Secretaryship of Labor is a man's job. Westbrook Pegler worshipfully urges Mr. Willkie to speak the whole truth—which to Mr. Pegler seems to be that women have no place in active politics. To him Mme. Perkins is "deplorable." Representative Mary Norton is just a henchwoman of Frank Hague, women in public life generally are just another lot of slimy politicians—and everyone who says otherwise is only being chivalrous.

Further indications of the new Republican strategy are popping up here and there in the form of attacks on the activities of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee.

Mr. Willkie's observation is not novel. It has been heard frequently within the Administration and among labor leaders. At the risk of being accused of misplaced chivalry, I will assert that Mme. Perkins has done some good deeds. One, which Mr. Pegler ought to applaud, was the cleansing of the Department of Labor of a flock of labor politicians of the lower order.

MME. PERKINS also supervised the drafting of the Federal Social Security Act and she had an important hand in the Wages and Hours and Labor Relations Acts. To Mr. Pegler these laws may be only additional proofs of the general corruption of politicians. Mr. Willkie, however, seems to think enough of them to indorse them—although reports are circulating that in private conversations he favors crippling amendments to the latter two, including the Smith amendments to the NLRB.

The list of Mme. Perkins' good deeds could be extended. The assertion that her job is a man's job arises chiefly from her inability to knock together the heads of some of the labor leaders. Of course, each of the main divisions of organized labor thinks the Department of Labor should be its personal property, so that the lot of anyone who, like Mme. Perkins, tries to make it serve all labor instead of one faction, is bound to be difficult.

FOR A TIME it seemed that Mme. Perkins' worst failure was in her effort to handle John L. Lewis. But that no longer can be regarded as much of a shortcoming. Nobody seems to be able to handle him, not even the wiser heads of the C. I. O., Messrs. Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman. Mr. Lewis does not seem to be responsive to any influence, unless it is the left wing of the C. I. O. By the same token, it is questionable whether he has much political influence left except in that quarter. Mr. Lewis has thundered his way out to the end of a limb, while both the Administration and the Nation are profiting from Mme. Perkins' policy of encouraging the more level-headed leadership in the C. I. O. exemplified by Murray and Hillman.

The main reason Mme. Perkins is not an overwhelming success is almost the opposite of Mr. Pegler's accusation. Her basic flaw as a public figure is that she doesn't know how to get along with the politicians.

Representative Norton was originally what the politicians would call "window dressing" for the Hague machine. But in Congress she has done valiant work for the wage-hour law and other labor legislation. Hague's interest in national politics is confined to patronage, and I suspect that close investigation would not reveal an instance in which he has told or advised Mrs. Norton how to vote on a piece of national legislation. Since she is always assured of re-election, Mrs. Norton probably has more freedom than 90 per cent of the members of the House.

THE CHIEF accusation against the women's division of the Democratic National Committee seems to be that it distributes too much New Deal legislation. Or maybe it is that the literature is too effective. Both charges are justified from the Republican viewpoint. The literature put out by this organization contains 75 per cent less drivel than that which issues from the men's divisions of either the Democratic or Republican National Committees. Most of it is refreshing enough to assume that voters are intelligent enough to be interested in facts and figures and temperately presented arguments.

The notion that an American citizen will respond to relatively calm reasoning may be foreign to both the machine politicians and Pegler. But the Democratic women are entitled to credit for this much effort to lift the level of political controversy.

Pegler's keenest anguish seems to be traceable to his feeling that women in politics cannot be attractive. He must have been living the life of a recluse. His bitterness might be assuaged by a call on Dorothy McAllister, the head of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, or some of the young women who are handing out Willkie buttons.

It is not clear yet whether Willkie and his supporters are really determined to put women back in the harem. Maybe it's just another symptom of their unconscious yearning for the good old days before World War I and woman suffrage. But in the name of national unity let us be spared, this year at least, a war between the sexes.

America And Europe

Col. Lindbergh's Thesis Examined

IN HIS LATEST radio address, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has embellished the theme which he has again and again expounded in the past year. His thesis is that the United States has no concern in what happens abroad, that it does not matter to us whether Great Britain triumphs or goes down to defeat at the hands of the Axis, that we are threatened with disaster at this time only because our statesmen have wantonly merged "our destiny with that of other lands."

In the course of his argument Monday night, the colonel covered a broad span of history. We have been very successful in keeping European influences out of America, he argues, and we did it when our population was far smaller than it is today.

"We won our independence from England," he said, "when we were a Nation of less than 4,000,000 people. We numbered only 10,000,000 when the Monroe Doctrine was established. With a population of 35,000,000, even though we had just emerged from four years of civil war, we made France remove her invading armies from Mexico. Later in the century, with a population of 75,000,000, we forced Spain to withdraw entirely from the New World."

THIS RECITAL of America's past prowess is flattering to our vanity. And there is just enough truth in it to fool the unwary. But it leaves out too much. And what it leaves out is precisely what would make hash of Col. Lindbergh's whole argument.

It is quite true that the United States which won its independence from Great Britain was a small Nation. But it did not win that struggle unaided. We were aided and in a very vital and decisive way by the existence of European rivalries which our statesmen were able to capitalize. Without the assistance of France, particularly of the French fleet, Gen. Washington's task might have proved impossible of achievement.

COL. LINDBERGH suggests that it was solely the backing which the United States gave the Monroe Doctrine which kept Europe from interfering in this hemisphere. It would be flattering to our vanity of that were so. But it simply isn't so. Had Europe been a unit in opposing the Monroe Doctrine in 1823, the fiat of the United States would have had little force in restraining those who wanted to reestablish Spain's sovereignty over her lost colonies. But Europe was not then a unit. Great Britain was as determined to block the plans of the Holy Alliance in this hemisphere as was this Nation. And Great Britain's veto had behind it the force of the British fleet.

In taking this stand the British were not moved in the least by sentimental consideratoins. They opposed the restoration of Spanish control over the former colonies not because they were interested in our safety or because "blood is thicker than water" or on any ideological grounds. They did so because the break-up of the monopolistic Spanish colonial system had given considerable commercial advantages to the British. They did not want that monopolistic system restored.

IT WAS AGAIN European circumstances which enabled us to force France out of this continent. When Napoleon took over Louisiana from Spain this country was faced by the dread prospect of a great military power being established along our Western flank and in control of the principal water route between the Great Lakes area and the Gulf. The prospect was so displeasing to the men who ruled this Nation that Jefferson in alarm envisaged the possibility that the United States might have to "marry ourselves to the British fleet and nation."

As it happened, Napoleon, lacking sea power and needing money, agreed to sell Louisiana to the United States. We did not have to join forces with Great Britain against France. We could continue our independent course without entangling alliances. And then, as later, the principal reason that we could do so is that the British fleet stood in the way of any continental European power with ambitions to establish itself in this hemisphere.

WHERE THE PRESENT crisis differs from all others with which the United States has been confronted since the Revolution is that now, for the first time in our history, the continent of Europe is dominated by a military nation which, if successful in the present struggle, can become a great naval power as well.

To assume, as Col. Lindbergh seems to, that this power would be friendly to us provided we took good care not to ruffle its feathers is to fly in the face of all the grim facts of the last few years. The fate of Poland, which opposed Hitler, differs only in degree but not in kind from the fate of Norway, Holland and Belgium, which were punctiliously neutral, or Rumania, which placed herself at the Third Reich's disposal.

To be sure, Col. Lindbergh favors "adequate defense," against direct attack. But whether we shall be given the time to achieve that "adequate defense" depends, in no small measure, on whether Great Britain can hold out.

That is the central fact of our present situation. To ignore it, as Col. Lindbergh would have us do and as Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese are trying to frighten us into doing, is to court disaster.

Fair Enough

A Fascistic Act

FROM OVER on the left the campaign cry is frequently heard that Wendell Willkie and those who support him, particularly the businessmen, would like to create a Fascist government, while from the right and center the same accusation is made against President Roosevelt.

I may be deceived by my own prejudices, but thus far I have seen no evidence of any such intention by Willkie, and I have seen plain proof of such a tendency in the New Deal. It is true that the businessmen of Italy and Germany helped the dictators of their respective countries when they were on the rise, but the American businessman has seen what happened to them. Fascistic controls are the very thing which they are fighting against and which President Roosevelt has fought doggedly to impose.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S government has closed in on the freedom of the Nation from two sides. Starting on the business side, he established restrictions which were heartily received by the majority of the people, who forgot momentarily in their anger and confusion against the great crash that free business was, after all, the very life of a free people. But neither in the debate on the Wagner Act nor in any of the political criticisms of the act in operation has the fascistic character of that law been appreciated.

This is a law which drives millions into unions against their will, under the rule of unioneers whose character the Government disclaims any right or responsibility to investigate. The Government, under the law, creates conditions which compel people to join, and the labor bosses, being big operators and indifferent to the rights of the unwilling victims, naturally string along with the Administration which delivered to them so many new members and so much more revenue in fees, dues and assessments.

SO THESE LABOR bosses put through resolutions levying political assessments on the members, including the unwilling ones, and turn the money over to the political treasury of President Roosevelt's Social-Democratic Party. Even though a man is a stand-pat or reactionary Republican, as every man has a right to be, he must contribute $1 or $5 or such amount as the union's politicians decide upon to help reelect President Roosevelt.

But, as we have seen in the past, President Roosevelt does not reveal his hand in his political campaigns, and we do not know what he would do about the unions after November if he should be reelected. He might then come out and say that because the Government does coerce workers into unions, therefore the Government must take control so as to protect the rights of the members. That is just what I think he would do, because if the Wagner Act is retained without change—and this Administration certainly has fought to prevent a change—the rank and file will raise such a howl against the union bosses that something will have to be done.

BUSINESS ONCE trusted President Roosevelt and accepted temporary favors from him, and the labor bosses who think they are so smart in accepting favors apparently forget that he loves power and collects for every favor that he confers. Although the right of Labor with a capital L to organize and bargain collectively is established, the status of labor unions still is indistinct and can be clarified by further laws creating Government authority over the unions. They thus would become official or semiofficial agencies.

We have seen, I think, that when the Social-Democrats control they do not control loosely or a little bit. They control firmly, and anyone who resists that control is branded with a bad name, invented on the spur of the moment by some witty epithetician hanging around the White House.

The union bosses are in very bad with their rank and file, and any move by Mr. Roosevelt to break their power by taking it over would be hailed by members, who then would find themselves in a Government labor front almost identical with those of Italy and Germany. I think Mr. Roosevelt deliberately encourages the labor bosses to commit outrages so that they will get a bad name and create a state of public opinion which would approve the establishment of this fascistic control.

Bygone Elections

A President Impeached

POPULAR assumption today is that there was no doubt of Abraham Lincoln's reelection in 1864. Nevertheless, on August 24 of that year he wrote, "It seems exceedingly probable that this Administration will not be reelected." But his strength was with the people and they overwhelmed the leaders who sought his overthrow.

JOHNSON

Outbreak of the War Between the States almost obliterated party lines. Douglas expressed the sentiment of hundreds of thousands of Democrats by his utterance, "There can be no neutrals in this war—only patriots and traitors."

The call for the Republican National Convention demanded "complete suppression of the existing rebellion." It met in Baltimore June 7, 1864. Lincoln was nominated unanimously and he forced the choice of Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, for Vice President.

Democrats who met in Chicago August 29 chose Gen. George B. McClellan as their candidate. He had been in retirement at Orange, N. J., after his removal from command of the Army of the Potomac in 1862. George H. Pendleton, of Ohio, was his running mate.

Sherman's capture of Atlanta and Sheridan's victories in the Shenandoah Valley caused a tidal wave of popular feeling for Lincoln, who had 212 electoral votes to McClellan's 21.

Lincoln was shot April 14, 1865, and died the next day. Andrew Johnson became President. Criticism of radical Republicans drove him to betray his party and he was soon in full sympathy with the Democrats.

So savage did the reconstruction contest become that Johnson was impeached by the House of Representatives, tried by the Senate and acquitted by one vote.

O'Conor Urges Roosevelt Election

Philadelphia, Oct. 15 (AP).—European dictator "would be delighted to see national defense bogged down by a change in Administration," Gov. Herbert O'Conor of Maryland asserted tonight in a speech prepared for delivery before the Philadelphia Forum.

Arguing the Democratic Party's cause, O'Conor declared in part:

"The American people must realize that, should there come about a defeat of the present Administration, there will be a period of transition between administrations that may last many months. Poland was crushed in 27 days; France in less than two months; time is vital, every day is important . . .

"We are asked to exchange seven years of experience, a lifetime devoted to public service, experience that is priceless in times of crisis, and exchang all of these for an executive who has devoted his whole life to the practice of law and the management of a public utility.

"The months of delay that would follow while such an individual acquired experience could be fatal."

Lewis Douglas, Ex-Budget Head, Supports Willkie

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—Lewis W. Douglas, former director of the Federal Budget, urged tonight the election of Wendell L. Willkie as President, asserting "if organized violence presses in on freedom from without, a third term may press in on freedom from within."

Douglas, one-time Democratic Congressman from Arizona, was the principal speaker at a Willkie rally tonight. Others appearing on the platform, in addition to Maryland Republican leaders, were Senator Edward Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and Richard F. Cleveland, Baltimore attorney and son of former President Grover Cleveland.

"As a Democrat," Douglas said, "I have a peculiar right to speak of the first organized effort to break a fundamental principle of American politics as deeply imbedded in our political structure . . . as is the Constitution itself.

"I refer to the attempt, encouraged and supported by the most powerful political machine in all American history, to continue the same personnel in responsible positions of public power even in the White House itself, beyond the allotted two-term period."

'Little Sister Of the Poor . . .'

Sister Pascaline de St. Simon, who has grown old in the service of the aged poor, celebrated her seventy-sixth birthday and her fiftieth anniversary with the Little Sisters of the Poor here.

She has spent most of her life in asking for alms and in giving them straightaway to the needy. Sister Pascaline, who never asked for anything for herself, found gifts heaping up yesterday at the Little Sisters' Home for the Aged, 220 H Street Northeast.

SISTER PASCALINE

Dozens of white lilies and yellow roses for her were grouped in the chapel where a solemn mass, coram pontifice, was held at 9 a. m.

A quilt for her had been pieced laboriously by the fingers of aged women at the home. Although the old people there have little money of their own, somehow they spared some of it to make up a cash gift for her.

Many other gifts came, and in one of them the old people shared—the turkey dinner donated to the home by W. J. O'Donnell, retired druggist.

Fourteen brothers, oblates of Mary Immaculate, brought a gift of music—Irish melodies and sacred songs—at a program in the afternoon. A white cake with gold icing from the Marist College. Numerous friends called during the day, bringing flowers and other gifts.

Although Sister Pascaline has been ill and had to retire from active work a few weeks ago, she returned to her strenuous oldtime hours yesterday morning, arising at

Sister Pascaline was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., as Frances Leary. Yesterday she summed up her life and her service by saying simply: "I am happy and humble."

Matron's Formula for Style Distinction—Dark Colors, Simple Lines, Gay Accents

Dress Your Age and Buy Wisely, Are Among Rules Given By Mrs. Dyer

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

Marshall Adams

PROBABLY the most acute problem case on the entire fashion front is the mature woman who is getting too old for frivolous young styles, yet isn't old enough for "grande dame" clothes.

Of course the woman of intelligence and charm will say "Why that's no problem at all—from 35 to 50 is one of the most alive and exciting stages of a woman's cycle of years," or, "I'm having more fun at 45 than I did at 20."

These are understandable reactions from the woman who has been reared in refinement and security where engagements, civic duties, wardrobes and beauty routines were effortlessly regulated for them. But what about the big majority of mature women with moderate means, little time and fairly limited outlook?

Our answer for women who fit this bill comes from a Washingtonian who should rank as an authority, since, even though having no fortune to spend on clothes, she manages to be one of the most distinctively groomed women in town.

Her name—Mrs. Margaret Joyce Dyer. She doesn't actually have to work for a living, but does so because she keeps "alive" and in trim for the competitive roll of young matron model she plays at many local fashion shows.

Chic and Poised

She's honest with herself because she has never once tried to recapture the enchanted age of 20 or 30, rather revels in her chance to be chic and poised. Although in appearance she resembles somewhat the Duchess of Windsor, she has never tried to capitalize on this. She is frank enough to give facts and figures from her own wardrobe budget for the benefit of the woman who wishes to be classified as a young matron rather than an old woman.

She sticks to black both by day and night since she feels slimmer, neater and more "dressed" in it; also finds it the least expensive color for accessories and quick changes. She never wears brown, which depresses her, but often uses gay Kelly greens or reds for accent.

She buys cautiously, never making a purchase that doesn't relate to her entire wardrobe or that doesn't do something for her. Never buys tweedy suits, which she considers too casual for her type.

She buys few basic clothes, but always the best dress or coat she can afford at the moment. She takes good care of them with regular pressings, cleanings, etc. She will spend about $50 for a basic black crepe or wool dinner dress, but will wear it two or three years. Since her dinner things usually have jackets, she works many subtle changes with them from season to season. Her daytime frocks cost between $20 and $30 and her shoes about $8 or $10.

She buys far more accessories than clothes and usually has a "street" and a "dress" bag each fall and four pairs of gloves, fresh and waiting for any dress emergency. These include a pair of black suede, one of black kid, one of white doeskin and one of colored suede to pick up the color in a pin or hat. She has her hats made and pays from $5 to $10 for them if they are furred or richly trimmed. Since she keeps her coiffure trim and short, she wears a youthful headsize and can stick faithfully to clever little hats with high crowns to give importance to her neat size 14 figure.

When she borders near a size 16 dress, she gets alarmed but not panic-stricken and just cuts out sweets. She exercises daily for 15 minutes and insists that constant exercise is no good without a careful daily check on eating habits. When asked what sort of exercise she did to maintain her erect, handsomely-poised bearing and proportions, she said her daily routine came from The Post's Ida Jean Kain.

Mrs. Margaret Dyer, smartly turned-out Washington matron, poses above in a hat well suited to distinguished features and neat, urbane coiffures. Her hat, from a Washington shop, is of black felt with a bowed velvet crown, cloud of flattering veil, and a brisk visor brim. She exemplifies how the up-to-date, youthful matron should dress

Balked by Canvas, Artist Uses Velvet, Achieves Success

IF YOU CAN'T transfer the "feel" of an old-time kitchen stove to canvas, try velvet, recommends Artist Bernice Cross. She painted the same stove half a dozen times without success, then remembered a blouse she thought would do the trick. The result was "Painting on Black Velvet," which visitors to the Phillips Memorial Gallery consider one of her best. "Velvet brought out the right highlights of the stove, which was in the dark basement of an old house," she explains. "I've experimented with various materials besides canvas, because it seems to me the right medium is just as important to a subject as the right color and lighting."

Bernice Cross

Miss Cross painted the much-discussed Mother Goose mural at Glenn Dale Sanatarium and the Pinocchio panels at Children's Hospital. She believes pictures should be "livable," and visualizes her work hanging on the wall of a room as she paints. She and her husband, James McLaughlin, who is connected with the Phillips Gallery, live in a restored coachman's quarters on Hillyer Court. The fact that both are artistically inclined promotes domestic harmony, she finds.

Conspicuous at the recent Bundles for Britain polo game was the official badge, roughly the size of a bread-and-butter plate. The debutante wearer of one lamented to some friends during the game that the police were after her. "I went through a stop sign and a red light on my way here, and to top it all I was speeding," she mourned. After the game the friends went to the precinct station to see how the police were treating her. They discovered that she had already left for home, and the desk sergeant assured them that all was well. "We fixed it all up—she gave us her badge!" he said with satisfaction.

Relief Party Badge Aid to Debutante In Speed Case

WHICH REMINDS US—Six-year-old John A. Hinckley, who attended the polo game with his mother and other members of Warrenton's horsy set, managed to deflate the ego of a lady seated behind him. They got to arguing as to whether or not a goal had been scored. He claimed he saw the ball go between the posts; the lady swore it hadn't but finally gave in with the remark, "Your eyes probably are better than mine." She must have felt old age descending like a pall, when he replied briskly, "Well, I should HOPE so!"

POSTSCRIPT DEPT.—An item last week referred to a house-hunting trip taken by Mrs. William D. Byron in a car plastered with Republican Johnson-for-Congress stickers; by the end of the ride, you remember, each sticker was concealed by a Byron-for-Congress sign. A reader reports that the incident had even wider political implications than appeared at first. The real estate agent, it seems, was Edwin Warfield, ardent Democrat and friend of Representative Byron; his boss is Robert L. McKeever, chairman of the Montgomery County Republican campaign committee; the bestickered car was borrowed from Merton A. English, jr., Young Republican leader.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Gadgeteer

You suddenly realize you are the only woman in town who hasn't a lapel gadget—or rather a conversation piece. No wonder people leave you in the corner at parties! No wonder men don't crowd about you in elevators or at the office, or make advances to you on street corners!

Well, you have just been the old cow's tail long enough. You are going right downtown and get the boldest, gaudiest, jazziest gadget you can find!

Elbowing through the mob at the costume jewelry counter, you get hold of an Indian piece pipe, try in your lapel . . . No, it doesn't click. Anyway you've never been an Indian fan . . . and besides it might link you with the appeasers.

The clerk brings out a cluster of puppy biscuits on a dog leash. They are the real biscuits, she explains, "treated" to make them unbreakable . . . Well, you adore dogs—but not exactly their food. And the biscuits looks strangely alien on your genteel black suit.

"Now this," says the saleswoman, holding up a miniature branding iron, "has been chosen the Gadget of the Week." Fine! You are already wearing the Belt of the Month and maybe the two—— No they don't either, you decide as you hold it to your coat. You are definitely not the Western type.

You next experiment with a miniature date book hanging from a jeweled pin. Now that might start something—no, it's too collegiate. You instinctively reach toward a jeweled spray of wheat—no, now, that won't do either! You simply must throttle your little brown hen instincts and get something to set people talking.

You try what the clerk describes as a "stunning jeweler's piece," a crystal gazer clip. Now that should win friends and influence people—no, looking in the mirror you realize you're not the gypsy type either.

"What about some cute little animals?" suggests the clerk. Well, you have always loved animals . . . But not in your lapel, you decide after experimenting with a sea horse, a lizard, a parrot, some love birds, an alligator, a spider and a 1,000-legged worm.

"The comic characters are very smart just now," says the clerk. . . . You try on the Goose Girl, the Fiddler Boy, Punchinello, Don Juan, Mickey Mouse, and a host of others . . . Some way you do not seem to get on with them any better than with the animals.

You reach toward a tiny four-leaf clover—then restrain yourself. Who on earth would ever look at a four-leaf clover? You try several kinds of locket fobs but on your lapel they look like silver balls hanging on a Christmas tree.

"Now here is something," says the clerk, producing a huge gold question mark . . . You try it on. The effect is slightly startling. Still . . . after all people WOULD look.

At home you face your own sedate mirror wearing the big question mark. Something is definitely wrong . . . Surely that cannot be you! . . . You take it off. There, that's better . . . Well . . . maybe . . . tomorrow you'd better take it back—and get the little four-leaf clover . . .

How to Clean Draperies

A stitch in time saves nine—that goes without saying . . . the same thing goes for a swish in a really good dry cleaner for slip covers and draperies. If they're sent regularly to a reliable dry cleaner before the grime gets ground in, they'll stay new longer, wear longer, keep their shape and body. The proper process should include prespotting before the actual cleaning process, with special separate steaming and fluffing of feathers in cushions which is the way a good establishment would do it.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Readers Argue That Mother of Illegitimate Child Has Social Obligation (to Child) to Wed Father, Despite the Fact That His Betrayal Killed Her Love

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Usually I'm as pleased with your advice as if I had given it myself! (Your answer of October 3 to the "frigid wife" was grand). But today (Saturday, October 12), for the first time, I heartily disagree with your reply to "Unhappy Eighteen," who asks whether to marry the father of her nine-months-old baby. I cannot indorse the line of reasoning with which you support your advice to her "not to marry him," since she no longer loves or respects him.

According to my view, she is resentful and sorry for herself. Yet she was just as much at fault as the baby's father. No girl in the world (motherless or not), except one who is mentally unbalanced, needs to be told "the facts of life." Instinct supplies such knowledge. She cannot excuse herself on the ground of ignorance.

She should be glad that the boy really loves her, regardless of their mutual mistake. Many girls are generous to boys who would heartlessly abandon them if they became pregnant. My advice to this girl is to put aside self-pity and see the boy's side of the picture. I believe if they were to marry, if only for the child's sake, they could yet find happiness, in spite of the past.

She expresses doubt of the boy's love for the baby because he has visited the infant only three times. But can't she imagine his feelings, when he has to present himself to the baby's caretaker, who doubtless knows the whole story? I suppose he is made to feel (by her as by the girl) that the whole sorry situation is entirely HIS fault. MRS. D. V. S.

What Say to Child In Years to Come?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I disagree most vehemently with the answer you gave to "Unhappy Eighteen." Surely the girl has a social responsibility to her child which takes precedence over her purely personal feelings. Granted that she no longer loves the baby's father—still, he IS the baby's father, and the baby is entitled to bear his father's name!

What will her feelings be when the baby is grown to manhood and realizes he bears an illegitimate name? What reasonable explanation can she give him then? Shall she say that it was her own selfish obstinacy which denied him his birthright? Shall she say that her sense of self-righteousness was greater than her sense of maternal responsibility?

The baby is the innocent victim of this adolescent tragedy. And the mother, remember, is not blameless. Ignorant of "the facts of life" by her own admission, yes—but where was her sense of "virtue outraged" at the time of betrayal?

I really believe that "Eighteen" loves the father of her child. After the initial shock of her betrayal wears away I believe she will concede that she was at least as much to blame as he, and will appraise his conduct with more charity. It seems to me she is thinking too much of herself and not enough of the baby. I believe she should grant the father's urgent wish to be married and give their child a name. She should strive for tolerance and understanding and have done with self-pity. MRS. M. H. S.

Man Held Deserving Of Chance to Atone

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Regarding the girl who refuses to marry the father of her child because he killed her love in betraying her trust, I want to say that I appreciate the encouraging tone of your reply. I am sure that she needs such a "prop" at this time, even though she seems to possess unusual strength and independence of mind.

However, I am wondering if you shouldn't have given more thought to the boy's side of the case. Have you ever seen a prodigal lad truly repentant (as this lad seems to be)? I have. And I know how greatly he, too, needs encouragement and a chance to atone—when he realizes the catastrophic consequences of a mistake of this kind.

This girl says of the boy: "He wanted to marry me at once." In short, he offered her his very life in atonement. What greater proof could he give of devotion and repentance? Of course, if the girl now detests him, no doubt she is justified in planning a life apart from him. But he is not to be dismissed as an unworthy character. While he may have been selfish, momentarily, in "betraying" her, he demonstrated a real capacity to "love and cherish" unselfishly, in the light of later events.

Because he visits the baby infrequently, the girl doubts that he loves the child. Yet she mentions that "he doesn't like the lady who keeps the baby." In the circumstances, it is understandable that the "lady" would view him with suspicion. And because he has already been repulsed by the girl, on account of the baby, I suppose he assumes that the child's nurse hates him, too. So, no matter how much he might love the baby, any nursery visits would be a real ordeal.

His insistence on marrying the mother gives the clue to his thoughts. It means: "I love her and I love the baby. I want to take care of them. I wish we could all be together as a family. But the odds are against me. She hates me. The nurse doesn't like me, either. What's the use of going to see the poor little fellow? I've tried every way I know to make amends. I can't do any more."

In conclusion, let me say that I hope the girl finds peace and security for herself and her child, somewhere, somehow, according to her choosing. But I also hope the boy has the same good fortune. I hope he, too, finds the life partner who can appreciate the depth and sincerity of his nature, and who will give him children he can cherish before the world.

Sallow Skin Can Be Corrected By Exercise, Diet and Serenity

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is a term, "night club tan," which seems to apply to New York's cafe society complexions. The glamorous life is no aid to beauty, for one's mode of living is directly reflected in the condition of the skin!

A clear, glowing complexion depends on your diet, your circulation, and even your disposition. It indicates very clearly whether you get enough exercise and fresh air, have well-balanced menus, and drink enough water.

Inasmuch as the skin gets its nourishment from the blood stream, the only skin food is a good diet. Everyone needs plenty of fresh fruits and fruit juices, and fresh vegetables and dairy products—particularly milk.

Any diet that is improperly balanced leads to skin troubles. Lack of the essential food elements prevents proper assimilation. Insufficient bulk is a cause of poor elimination. A smoothly functioning system—with good digestion, assimilation and elimination—is essential to skin beauty.

Exercise Important

Since the circulation is such a big factor, exercise is very important. Unless you exercise enough to keep your circulation up and doing, your skin is inadequately nourished—and shows it! A daily walk in the fresh air is really a beauty tonic.

If there is difficulty with the elimination, start the day by drinking one or two glasses of hot or cold water with the juice of a lemon. In addition, you may need special exercises to tone the abdominal muscles. These may be simple. It's good exercises to lie on the back on the floor, legs flexed and feet on the floor, and pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles, then relax. Repeat ten times.

Another effective exercise is taken in the same position and onsists of drawing alternate knees up to the chest while pulling up and in with the lower abdominal wall. These will serve as samples—but any exercise which tone the muscles of the abdmoinal wall tend to improve the elimination.

Nerves No Help

Serene people usually have lovelier complexions than the fuss-budgets. Nervousness has a bad effect on the digestion which spreads to the entire system. Healthful habits of living contribute to stability of the nervous system and, indirectly, to a clear complexion.

When it comes to external factors in skin beauty, cleanliness and the regular use of a good cream are not to be underrated. Since dermatologists still disagree as to which is the better cleanser, soap and water or a cream, we'll take plenty of both! The essential things appear to be: to keep the skin clean, and to use a cream to keep it soft.

It doesn't do much good to keep your skin clean if you use a soiled powed puff. Make it a rule to use a clean puff, always—and that should apply to the one in your compact, too.

Incorrect Speech Stamps You

THE SPEECH of her smart fellow-vacationers sounds so different from hers! So, uneasy and self-conscious, she talks in an affected way—which amuses more than it impresses.

Just simple English errors cause that "difference" she feels so keenly. She says "he DON'T" and "ACROST;" well-bred, educated people say "he DOESN'T," "ACROSS."

No, there's nothing mysterious about cultured speech, no quality that even a person of little schooling can't acquire. But how important your English is—in social, business contacts!

If you make such errors as "I'm REAL happy to be here . . . I COME by boat . . . I DON'T HARDLY think so" you're rated as far down in the social scale.

But you're put at the top if you say correctly "I'm VERY happy . . . I CAME by boat . . . I HARDLY think so."

Unfortunately, we are often deaf to our own mistakes—are the last to recognize our faulty English. To spare yourself that embarrassment, inspect your speech from time to time and root our errors which may have crept in.

There's no danger then of making the wrong impression on people you'd like to know better. You avoid a crude: "I'll try AND go . . . WHERE'S the tennis courts? . . . Who is that light-COMPLECTED girl?"

You appear socially acceptable by saying, "I'll try TO go . . . WHERE ARE the tennis courts? . . . Who is that light-COMPLEXIONED girl."

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Common Errors in English," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 160 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Prenuptial Parties Set For Mary Kennedy

Warrenton Belle to Be Married Nov. 8 to Allan Royal Moulton At the Home of Her Mother

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A VIRGINIA BELLE who has been the center of the spotlight as a first-rate fashion model lately will spend most of the next three weeks being entertained at a round of pre-nuptial fetes.

She is Mary Selden Kennedy, of Warrenton, Va., who is scheduled to become Mrs. Allan Royal Moulton on November 8, and who has recently completed plans for her wedding. The Warrenton home of her mother, Mrs. Anthony K. Kennedy, will be the scene of the 4:30 p. m. ceremony. The bride will be given in marriage by her uncle, Dr. William Beverley Mason, of Washington, and she will have Mrs. Douglas Rathbone Smith, of Alexandria, the former Rice Barrett, as matron of honor.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Bridesmaids will include Sarah Warren, Betsy Charrington and Doris Becker, all of Warrenton, and Paggy Townsend, of Washington. Anthony Dandridge Kennedy, brother of the bride-elect, will be best man, and ushers selected are Douglas Rathbone Smith, Robert Woods, Dandridge Mason and James Clark. Mr. Moulton is the son of Mrs. V. S. Little, of Washington, and R. W. Moulton, of Pierre, S. Dak.

TRAVEL TOPICS: On her way back to Washington after a summer in Rumania is Senora de Cardenas, Rumanian-born wife of the Spanish Ambassador. Early in the summer she took the Clipper to Lisbon and went directly from there to Bucharest to visit her relatives, the Nano family. At that time, she hoped to persuade them to accompany her back to this country, but latest reports have it that they declined to leave and that she is returning alone. She is expected to be here before the end of the month—exactly when, the Ambassador himself does not know . . . Mrs. Leland Harrison, wife of the United States Minister to Switzerland, is visiting Mrs. George A. Garrett at the latter's Virginia estate, Chilly Bleak. Mrs. Harrison plans to be off to Switzerland soon . . . Leaving Washington yesterday after a brief visit with Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Patridge Price, of Winnetka, Ill., and their daughter, Frances, who are now at Hot Springs, Va., for a visit. The trio hopes to return to Washington later, and I hope they will, for Miss Price is one of the prettiest young ladies I've seen around town lately. She was quite a center of attention at George Abell's cocktail party the other afternoon. Incidentally, she's a granddoughter of the "Dr. Price," of baking powder fame.

DEB DATA: Louisa Catherine Adams Clement, who recently gave up plans for a Christmas ball and turned the money over to Great Britain's defense fund, is to have quite a whirl this winter just the same. She will make her bow at the Baltimore Bachelor's Cotillon on December 2, and will share honors with Miss Margaret Carey Tuckerman at a dinner to be given beforehand by Mrs. Carroll Van Ness, of Green Spring Valley, suburban Baltimore . . . Expected to arrive in Washington shortly after Thanksgiving will be Mary Churchill Mathews, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Mathews, of New York. She will come for a two-months' visit with her grandmother, Mrs. Churchill Candee, at the St. Alban's apartments. Mrs. Candee recently returned to Washington after a summer at York Harbor and a short visit in New York . . . Sometime during the Christmas holidays—you will learn the exact date later—Yvonne Perrin, doughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lilo McMullin Perrin, of San Francisco, will make her bow to Capital society. The fete will be a tea dance at the Congressional Country Club, and sharing honors with Yvonne will be her cousin, Moira Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald D. Kennedy, of San Francisco. The two debs are spending the winter with Mrs. Perrin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Harr, of Chevy Chase. Mrs. Harr will fete the girls at a small dinner party at Hotel 2400 before the Black and White ball.

CAPITAL CALENDAR: Mr. and Mrs. Allen Haden will entertain at cocktails on Monday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hinkle, who will arrive Saturday to spend some time here. Mr. Hinkle, who is counselor of the United States Legation at Trujillo City and who served as charge d' affaires until Robert Scotten recently took over duties as Minister there, was second secretary and consul at the time Mr. Haden was third secretary. The party will take place at the Haden home at 3070 Q Street . . . Expected to come to Washington for an extended stay this winter are Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell and her daughter, Ann, who have visited here frequently. Now completing a visit in California—where they have been widely feted in San Francisco, Santa Barbara and Hollywood—Mrs. Mitchell and Ann will be back in their New York apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria towers on October 21. Their many Washington friends are hoping that they will come to the Capital some time in November.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

LUNCHING WITH Jacques Dumaine the other day at his charming little house in Georgetown I met M. Lacour Gayet who had just arrived from Vichy on the Clipper. M. Lacour Gayet is quite familiar with Washington, having been financial counselor of the French Embassy here for several years in the middle 1920's. He finds the Capital much changed and more beautiful than ever and was also much struck by the absence of "speakeasies" in New York.

No one had thought about "speakeasies" for so long that the idea had all the freshness of novelty and a discussion was begun as to whether they had been "cosy" or not. The consensus of opinion was that, cosy or not, the liquor sold in them had caused a national headache and that their demise was a reason for cheers.

ANOTHER NEWCOMER lunching with M. Dumaine that day was Mrs. Arthur Crossley. Mrs. Crossley, who is English, has taken a house in Georgetown and will remain here with her two children for the winter. She arrived, looking very chic in a black and white tailleur, a little breathless with having explored her way through Georgetown.

Jo Alsop was presented to Mrs. Crossley as being one of her neighbors. He said he hoped she had been receiving her mail satisfactorily of late as the postman always left it at his house and he in turn sent it over to her by his servant. We all agreed that this showed a high regard on the part of the postman for Mr. Alsop's reliability. His motto must be, "when in doubt ask Alsop."

M. LACOUR GAYET, like everyone who arrives by Clipper these days, was questioned about his trip. He reported that flying above the clouds for hours on end was rather monotonous but that what impressed him most was the topsy-turvy condition of the world which made the trip from Vichy to Lisbon days long and the trip across the Atlantic a matter of a few hours.

Among those asked by M. Dumaine to meet M. Lacour Gayet were the Third Secretary of the British Embassy, Anthony Rumbold, and Count Andre de Limur of the French Embassy.

RECENT VISITORS to Philadelphia were Count and Countess Lasocki who visited the United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony Biddle and Mrs. Biddle's son-in-law and daughter Prince and Princess Aleksander Hohenlohe. Also staying with the Biddles were the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Madame Gouthier and Miguel Quirno-Lavalle of the Argentine Embassy.

The Biddles, who have a real love for Poland, have been going here and there in the United States, wherever there is a large Polish population, and speaking to these people about the fate of their friends and relatives in their former homeland. Mrs. Biddle talks to the women, answering as far as possible their questions as to what happened in the district of their particular interest. Mr. Biddle does the same for the men and they both try to bring as much comfort as they can into the lives of the bereaved.

MR. AND MRS. Hugh Cummings, jr., entertained at dinner the other night in honor of Elizabeth Shouse and Cuthbert Train whose wedding will take place October 26.

Mrs. Elizabeth Butterworth will come to Washington this week and will stay at the Fairfax Hotel. Mr. Butterworth is at the United States Embassy in London.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Richard Sanders, of Warrenton, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Ellen Arvilla, to William Armstrong Laing, jr., of Amissville, Va.

The bride-elect attended Mary Washington College. Mr. Laing is a graduate of the Pawling Boys' School, New York. The wedding will take place in November.

Mrs. Tuckerman Gives Dinner In Honor of Duchess of Crussol

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman entertained at dinner last night in honor of the Duchess of Crussol. The other guests included the Duke of Crussol, the Duchess' sister-in-law, Mrs. Alexander Gordon, and Miss Elizabeth Gordon, who are en route to their home in Baltimore after a summer at their residence in Front Royal, Va.; Lady Chalkley, Mme. Emmanuel Lombard, Miss Julia Jones, of Baltimore; Robert Webster, Walter Davidge, Lynch Luquer and Charles Mason Remey.

Later the party attended the benefit showing of the film, "The Baker's Wife," sponsored to raise funds for the British American Ambulance Corps.

Mrs. Robert Stewart-Richardson, vice chairman of the Washington Committee for the Ambulance Corps, entertained at dinner for the Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Pott, the Assistant Naval Attache and Mrs. Coleby and Mrs. D'Oley Hughes. Mrs. Edward Beale McLean and Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin also entertained at dinners before the benefit showing.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

ALEXANDER KIRK, Charge d'Affaires of our Berlin Embassy and now en route home by Clipper, has been named Counselor at Rome, Edward Reed, who has been at that post, has been ordered home for duty at the State Department and is expected shortly to join Mrs. Reed and their children, who came back just before Italy entered the war.

DUDLEY HARMON

For the first time, Mr. Kirk may find a slight chill in the welcome extended him by his fellow property owners in Georgetown. Citizens there are annoyed at his plan to sell his huge house at the corner of Wisconsin avenue and R street to be converted into an apartment. The zoning commission is considering a protest filed by many of his neighbors, including Mrs. Frank West, who lives next door; John Walker, curator of the Mellon Gallery; David Finley, Maj. and Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., and about 70 others.

FOR ALMOST 15 years—ever since Mr. Kirk bought the house in 1926—it has stood empty. The sprawling yellow stone residence with its heavily barred windows looks so much like a medieval villa that people are surprised to learn it is really one of the oldest Georgetown houses. Originally called Mount Hope, it was purchased from its original owners by a butcher, who installed the square tower in the middle. Mr. Kirk added a wing or two. He fixed the windows so you can't see out, for, he says, "What's the use of going inside a house if you spend your time looking out?"

The diplomat also did away with all woodwork, flowers, books, and so forth, and instead concentrates on mirrored walls and enormous divans. One of his sofas is eight feet wide.

THE HOUSE has been for sale for a long time. Mr. Kirk is said to prefer life in Italy, where he owns property, and where he was with our embassy at one time. His Georgetown neighbors are all agreed that he is a charming man, but they do wish he would see their side in the zoning matter.

MRS. JEFFERSON PATTERSON, wife of our First Secretary in Berlin, no longer gathers flowers in her garden, but pieces of shrapnel. The former Marvin Breckinridge writes friends here, though, that she's such a sound sleeper that so far the night raids haven't bothered her. As the bride of a diplomat, Mrs. Patterson can no longer continue with the radio broadcasts which she started from Europe just after the war began.

PRETTY KITTY HILL, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, has picked Friday, November 29, at the date of her debut. Her mother and former Senator Bingham will give a tea for her at their house on K street. Miss Hill is the third and last of a trio of attractive sisters, the others being Mrs. Phillips Clarke and Mrs. Townsend Phillips. She will combine festivities with a secretarial course.

THE JULIAN CHETWYNDS of the British embassy, now on a motor trip through Canada, installed their baby son on Long Island with Lady Lindsay before leaving. Mrs. Chetwynd is a niece of Lord Halifax. Her husband was turned down for military service because of his eyes and serves instead as a clerk at the embassy . . . Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs have gone to New York, where he is working in the radio and press division of the Willkie Eastern Headquarters. They will return to Fairfax, Va., in time to vote.

Paris Couple Wait To Open Package From Mme. Saito

When Mr. and Mrs. Vinard LeVaine Paris, who were married last Saturday, open their home, which is being decorated, they will find out what's in a big package given to Mr. Paris two years ago by Mme. Saito, widow of the former Japanese Ambassador here. Mr. Paris was Chief of Staff for the Ambassador, and on her departure, thoughtful Mme. Saito left a parcel with him to be opened when and if he married. The couple have been waiting until they settle in their home to open it.

The bride is the former Ollie Ivey Floyd and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ivey, of Sherman, Tex. The couple were married in the Christian Church at Rockville, Md. The bride wore an original Hattie Carnegie model in blue with a Persian jacket. Mrs. Mina T. Stetson was her only attendant and Leo D. Hochstetter, of Washington and New York, was best man.

Mrs. Paris attended Austin College in Sherman, the American Academy of Arts, Chicago, and Texas Christian University. She came here in 1935 to serve as secretary to Arthur Walsh, assistant administrator of Federal Housing. She was society editor and later associate editor of the Young Democrat Magazine. In 1937 she accompanied the President of the Philippine Islands and Mme. Quezon and their family on a twelve-day trip to Mexico City as guests of the Mexican government. Mrs. Paris is now with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. Paris is a graduate of George Washington University Law School and is in the real estate and tourist business here. He and his bride are living at 604 Erie avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

The Misses Norris will make their debut this season and though they haven't set on a date they are hoping it will be during the Christmas holidays.

Ethel M. Jost And P. B. Davis Are Married

Couple Take Vows In Floral Setting At Hamline Church

Autumn leaves, white chrysanthemums and palms formed the setting for the marriage last evening of Miss Ethel Margaret Jost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Jost, to P. Baxter Davis, son of Mrs. Philip M. Kemon and the late Ira Ainsley Davis. The couple exchanged vows in the Hamline Methodist Church, the Rev. Harry Wilson Burgan officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white duchess satin made with a shirred bodice, Elizabethan collar and leg o' mutton sleeves. Her veil, which her sister, Mrs. Wade I. Brinkley, wore at her wedding, fell from a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a handkerchief of rose point lace and a cascade of white orchids and stephanotos.

Mrs. Brinkley Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Brinkley served as matron of honor, attired in violet faille taffeta with a small circular collar of white lace. Her matching circular veil was held in place by a small lace cap and she carried white chrysanthemums.

Miss Elizabeth Ann King was maid of honor for her cousin, wearing amethyst. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Lloyd Farmer, sister of the bridegroom, in deep Spanish rose; Miss Grace Wagner, in dusty rose; Miss Florence Whitcomb, in copen blue, and Mrs. Oscar Smith in deep congo blue. The first two carried amethyst chrysanthemums and the bouquets of the others were bronze mums.

Mr. Brinely was best man for Mr. Davis, whose ushers included Richard Heinrichs, Rowden Midgett, Finley Cheston, Archie Burgess and John S. Jacobsen.

Home Reception Follows Ceremony

A reception at the Jost home followed the ceremony. Mrs. Jost wore a crepe gown in two shades of violet with a corsage or roses and valley lillies and Mrs. Kemon was in beige crepe with a jacket of gold lace and a corsage of talisman roses.

After a wedding trip to Asheville, N. C., the couple will live at 3822 Davis Place. They will be at home there after November 1.

The bride is an alumna of Wilson Teachers' College and did graduate work at Northwestern University. She is a member of Kappa Delta Phi, Sigma Phi Gamma and the Twenty Club. Mr. Davis attended George Washington University and received his law degree from National University. He is a member of Sigma Nu, Gate and Key, Pi Delta Epsilon and Beta Lamda Sigma.

Red Cross Delegate Reports on Europe

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

One hundred per cent of the food and other relief supplies sent by this country to Central Europe has reached its destination, Wayne Chatfield Taylor told the Women's National Press Club at its luncheon yesterday in the Willard Hotel. Mr. Taylor, who has recently returned from a year in the war area, where he was sent as delegate from the American Red Cross to direct the relief work, indicated he believed the same would be true if supplies were sent to feed French children this winter.

Mr. Taylor told of the problem of feeding the 250,000 British and French prisoners and caring for the wounded during the first weeks of German occupation. Troops moved so fast several thousand prisoners would often be left behind "in any place that had a fence around it" with only three or four guards, he said. These men has usually been without food for two or three days before their capture and it was three or four days before supplies could be got to them. Most prisoners have now been sent to Germany, he said.

The Red Cross used motor cars, trucks and ambulances—given by the French who feared the vehicles would be confiscated when the Germans arrived—to transport supplies to camps near Paris and then to more distant ones as fast as they were reported.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, who was also a guest at the luncheon, clarified the organization's position in regard to sending food to Europe this winter for the children, saying it had not yet adopted a policy as to whether it would feed them.

The Red Cross is an agency of mercy, he said, whose primary objective is to save human life. From this standpoint it desires that the suffering children be fed. On the other hand, he said, it is a quasi-official organization becoming, in case of war, an arm of this country's defense. Although it operates as an independent relief agency it is required to have safe conduct from the belligerent nations for any supplies it sends and may not carry relief operations to the point where they affect the military situation.

Mr. Davis expressed the opinion that condensed milk for the children was not likely to aid the German cause. If the British allow such supplies to go through, it will be assurance enough that they will be of no military consequence to the Germans, Mr. Davis stated, and without such sanction, they cannot be shipped. "We shall not try to run the blockade," he asserted.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman was a guest at the luncheon as were Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Stanley F. Reed and Mrs. William O. Douglas, wives of Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, and Lawrence Langer, coauthor with his wife of "Suzanna and the Elders." Their plan of dividing the work, said Mr. Langer, was in operation yesterday—his wife doing the rewriting on the play while he attended the luncheon. Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the president, presided.

League Course To Open Today

Field trips and a course of lectures on community social problems will open today for the provisional members of the Junior League, training them for full-fledged membership in the organization.

Frank Lorimer, professor of population studies at American University, will give the opening lecture at 10:30 this morning in the league clubrooms, 2001 Massachusetts avenue.

The course, lasting seven weeks, will be conducted Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Miss Mary Winslow, a member of the executive board of the Women's Trade Union League and the United States member of the Inter-American Commission of Women, will speak Friday, and Mrs. Helen Martin, of the Board of Public Welfare, next Monday.

The league gives the course in order to insure its members being equipped with an understanding of the civic and welfare organizations in the city and their services, so as to give intelligent assistance in a volunteer capacity. Not until they complete the course and pass a satisfactory examination are they accepted for full membership in the league.

The course is directed by Mrs. Gerhard A. Gesell, chairman, and Mrs. Charles L. Sturtevant, assistant chairman of provisional members; Mrs. L. Metcalfe Walling, chairman of education, and Miss Mary L. Poole and Miss Lucia Murchison, advisory members of the committee.

Voters League Holds Luncheon

More than 130 members of the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Voters yesterday attended the opening luncheon held at the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, president, outlined the league's proposed program for the season, which emphasizes the subjects, "Know Your Washington" and "Foreign Policy." She stressed the importance of citizens' taking a keen interest in the needs of their communities.

France suffered defeat, she said, because its people were more interested in personal privileges than in democracy. She asserted that, if there is a full-fledged interest in the practice of democracy in this country, it will not have men in Congress who adhere to the spoils system. The Ramspeck Bill, which has the support of the National League of Women Voters was a real merit system bill when it came out of committee, but was emasculated in the House, she said.

A housewarming will be held in about two weeks at the league's new headquarters, 1216 Connecticut Avenue, and the annual meeting has been tentatively set for November 2.

Dinner Honors Mrs. Dudley, Of Altrusa

Club President Outlines Two New Projects for Year

Mrs. Dessalee R. Dudley, of Battle Creek, Mich., international president of the Altrusa Club, last night was guest of honor at a dinner given by the Washington and Baltimore Altrusans at Olney Inn.

Mrs. Dudley outlined two new projects of the international organization both in the field of vocational guidance. The one is the establishment of a vocational consultant service under the direction of Dr. Elinor Barnes, a member of the faculty of Beaver College, in Pennsylvania. Dr. Barnes is giving her time to Altrusa's service during a year's leave of absence.

The clubs throughout the country are being urged to set up bureaus offering vocational counsel to youth. These will serve high school students but are chiefly for young people out of school and in need of employment, she said. Altrusa clubs are already cooperating with other groups in many cities in conducting such bureaus, said Mrs. Dudley.

The second project is that of providing counsel for mature women who are unemployed and helping them to make economic adjustment.

Clubs may choose their own work, whatever they decide is most useful to the community in which they are located, Mrs. Dudley told the local members, but these two projects were selected for this year by the international organization because of the pressing need in these directions.

Miss Edith Macauley, president of the Washington Club, presided at the dinner which was attended by 14 Washington members and 17 from the Baltimore club. Miss Mary Lee Poe is president of the latter. Altrusa is the oldest women's service club in the country and has the largest membership.

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Dudley had luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel with Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, past president of the local Altrusa Club, who was chairman of arrangements for last night's dinner; Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, and Miss Gwladys Jones, secretary of Quota Club International, whose headquarters is here.

She was the guest of Mrs. Gilchrist during her stay in Washington. She came from Boston, where she addressed a dinner meeting of the Boston Club Monday night, following a conference of clubs of the First District, which she attended in New York over the week-end. She will go from here to the Third District Conference in Ashland, Ky., and from there will tour the Southwest, visiting clubs in that section.

Roosevelt Plans 2 Paid Broadcasts

More Defense Trips Slated, Continuing After Election Day

By Robert C. Albright

By the Associated Press

At least two "paid for" broadcasts before election day and an accelerated round of defense inspections were scheduled by the President yesterday as Republicans stepped up their own "home stretch" campaign.

The President said he didn't know whether his speeches would be political or not and that his defense industry inspections would continue beyond election day. His objective, he said, was to speed up production for defense.

Extension of the President's speaking plans followed Gallup poll reports shifting Illinois, Indiana and Michigan to the Willkie column and noting Willkie gains in Ohio.

Drewry Optimistic

Before receiving reporters, President Roosevelt heard reports on Nebraska and Michigan from State Democratic leaders and called in Representative Patrick H. Drewry, of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee.

Drewry later told reporters he "felt so good about House Democratic prospects that he didn't like to talk about it." He predicted Democrats will retain control of the House "and might pick up as many as 25 seats." Republican Congressional leaders are claiming 60 seats.

Republicans, meanwhile, jubilantly announced that Senator Hiram Johnson, who won renomination in California on all tickets, will speak in opposition to a third term for the President on a Nation-wide hookup Friday night at 10 p. m. Johnson, confirming this, told reporters they could "draw their own inferences" on whether or not he will indorse Wendell Willkie.

Republicans have counted heavily on the popularity of Johnson to help cut the California majorities for Roosevelt indicated in current surveys of that State. Willkie highly praised Johnson's liberal record in his recent tour of the State. Previously at a press conference the President had said he no longer considered Johnson a liberal.

The campaign "stretch," on which Willkie backers have based their hopes, will be marked by dispatch of many Republican big names into the field, including virtually all of the pre-Philadelphia Republican Presidential possibilities.

Into the Midwest again yesterday went Senator McNary, of Oregon, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, who originally planned only "a few speeches." McNary will speak today in Hutchinson, Kans.; tomorrow in Enid, Okla., and Friday in Sedalia.

The President announced the Democratic National Committee had arranged for him to make two major radio addresses, one on October 23 and the other a week later. He said the broadcasts will be paid for. Both broadcasting companies require payment for political speeches. The President said that while he didn't know the speeches would be political, he wanted to be free to talk about his great-grandfather fighting in the Revolutionary War if he wanted to.

In announcing a lengthened list of inspection tours, continuing after the November 5 election day, President Roosevelt said reports showed defense output already had increased at plants visited. Each visit to a defense site, he said, was followed by a little more pep in production there. He said he proposed to continue this means of stepping up production.

While no dates have been set, either before or after the elections, the President said he plans a tour down the Connecticut Valley from the Springfield (Mass.) Armory to Hartford, New Haven and Bridgeport, Conn.

He said he wished also to visit the new aviation plant at Buffalo, N. Y.; the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. plant at Kearney, N. J.; the New York Shipbuilding Co. plant at Camden, N. J., and the Frankford Arsenal near Philadelphia.

Other trips, he said, might take him later to the munitions plants at Waterbury, Conn.; the Brooklyn Navy Yard; the Battery Tunnel and the Pennsylvania Turnpike, which he has been asked to dedicate.

Such trips would take him over territory recently traveled by Willkie.

Merwin H. Browne, Buffalo Evening News reporter, asked the President if in future speeches he intended to answer "charges made by your political opposition that you are seeking to become a dictator."

The President said it was an interesting question and had everything in it but the kitchen sink. He asked who wrote it, and Browne replied, "I did." Mr. Roosevelt offered his congratulations. Browne again asked for a comment, and the President repeated his congratulations.

Election Fraud Hearing Nears Free-for-All

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Oct. 15.—A Senate campaign investigating subcommittee heard testimony charging widespread election fraud in Hudson County today during a stormy session that at times neared the proportions of a free-for-all debate.

Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, chairman, at one point ordered an attorney to "sit down," a witness informed counsel for Jersey City that he was speaking "nonsense," former United States Senator John Milton was asked by committee counsel not to make "stump speeches," and later Senator Tobey (Republican), New Hampshire, sitting with Adams, interrupted Milton, counsel for Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City and for the Democratic State committee, during the latter's questioning of a witness and cried:

"There is a passion in our hearts for just one thing; to come down here and do a good honest job without fear or favor and we don't give a damn for the Republican State Committee, the Democratic State Committee or Frank Hague. . . . we are working for the mass of the people of New Jersey that they may be able to hold true in their hearts without being sullied the right of free elections. Everything we can get germane to that we will put across here no matter how long it takes or how much it costs. So help us God."

During a heated exchange between James A. Tumulty, jr., Independent candidate for United States Senator whose petition charging election fraud in Hudson brought about the inquiry, and Charles A. Rooney, acting corporation counsel of Jersey City, Tumulty answered a demand by Rooney that he write on a pad of paper "the name of one fraudulent voter in Hudson" with the charge that there were at least 60,000.

"There isn't enough paper," Tumulty declared, citing the libel laws as a deterrent of naming any.

Another witness, William E. Sewell, Republican superintendent of elections in the Democratic powerhouse of Hudson County, enumerated illegal transfers, voting of "floaters," ballot erasures, intimidation of voters and illegal assistance as methods of fraud which he said he had seen practiced in Hudson of which Jersey City's Mayor Hague is the dominant political leader.

Sewell said it was a fact it was not possible to hold an honest election in Hudson County and said that although his deputies had theoretical powers in the county they were not able to enforce the law.

Elliott Rules U. S. May Ignore Labor Violators' Defense Bids

Acting Comptroller General Elliott yesterday ruled that violators of the labor laws may be denied national defense contracts, even if they are the low bidders.

Meanwhile, Justice Jennings Bailey of the District Court upheld a Labor Department order "blacklisting" a cotton mill for three years for violating the wage-hour laws.

The Defense Commission recently announced that those receiving defense contracts should comply with the labor laws. Secretary of War Stimson asked Elliott for a ruling on how far the policy might control the letting of contracts by competitive bids.

Elliott, in his opinion, indicated the provisions of rearmament legislation which permit contracts to be let by negotiation or by advertising for bids and said it was his view that the authority thus granted "comprehends the lesesr authority to utilize advertising to the extent administratively deemed appropriate without restricting final determination of the bidder to whom the contract should be awarded."

The Lane Cotton Mills, New Orleans, which have supplied millions of yards of cloth for military use, asked the District Court to restrain an order entered by Secretary of Labor Perkins after hearings in August.

Justice Bailey refused the injunction, rejecting contentions of Attorneys Vernon Lowrey and Henry Goodman that the order was oppressive and invalid. Should the Government try to collect the $42,000 by withholding sums due the firm, said Justice Bailey, the firm could sue. If the Government brought suit to collect, the firm could then offer its defense.

Quoting a recent declaration of the United States Court of Appeals here that "there is no constitutional right to a Government contract," Justice Bailey said the courts lacked authority to interfere with orders entered under the Walsh-Healy Act.

As a mere aspirant for contracts, Justice Bailey added, the firm had no standing in court.

Representing the Government were Assistant District Attorney John J. Laskey and Sidney J. Kaplan, Special Assistant to the Attorney General.

In addition to the tobacco, vegetables and fruits, scores of entries were received in the home handiwork, food conservation and bakery divisions.

Mrs. Charles R. Belt and Mrs. John W. Williams are in charge of the household displays; J. Duke Belt and C. O. Drury, the corn exhibits, and Carrow T. Prout and Louis Gray, tobacco.

Arrangements were being made for quartering the livestock exhibits in a field outside town, where they will be judged Thursday, the final day of the fair. Other exhibits are at the town hall.

Fort Totten Area to Get Bus Service

PUC Approves Extension of Rock Creek Church Line To Hawaii Avenue

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday approved extension of the Rock Creek Church bus line from Webster Street and Rock Creek Church Road to Allison Street and Hawaii Avenue Northeast, to accommodate several hundred families in a newly developed section near Totten Park.

The Hampshire Heights Citizens Associatoin has agitated for the extension of the bus route for several months. The bus will make its terminus on the west side of Allison Street at Hawaii Avenue. The new arrangement is expected to be in operation in several days.

Residents of the area bounded by Hawaii Avenue, North Capitol Street, Crittenden Street and Bates Road Northeast have been served by the bus line which ended at Webster Street and Rock Creek Church Road, as much as a half-mile from some homes.

Brookland

The Brookland Citizens Association resolved last night to renew efforts to obtain a branch public library in the vicinity of Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast to serve the Brookland, Michigan Park and North Woodbridge areas.

Speakers at the meeting, held in the Masonic Temple, Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast, said the nearest branch library was at least a mile away from the association's members, and it was inadequate.

The association also heard Maj. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant District Engineer Commissioner, review a number of improvement projects which the association had successfully sponsored and promise his cooperation in the future.

Police Capt. Oscar J. Letterman, of Twelfth Precinct, told of efforts against crime conditions in the section.

President M. M. McLean's action in opposing a liquor store at 3730 Tenth Street Northeast was approved.

Columbia Heights Forum

Opposition to any proposal for eliminating the playground at Powell Junior High School at Lamont and Sixteenth Streets Northwest was expressed last night by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights.

Fernald, second vice president; Miss Helen McLeod, secretary; James C. Cranford, treasurer; Dr. L. F. Kebler and William J. Oates, chaplain; W. W. Coulliette and Dr. Kebler, delegates to the federation.

Cathedral Heights

Opposition to any proposed zoning in the area was voiced last night by the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

The unit approved action of the Northwest Council and the Federation of Citizens Association in urging reopening of the District Testing Laboratory. Members carried on a discussion of national defense and offered their services to the local authorities.

Barrett, financial secretary; Joseph H. Grosman, corresponding secretary; S. B. Passmore, sergeant-at-arms. John S. Hamill was named treasurer, and Ernest F. Henry was chosen with Craver as a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Resolutions were adopted asking for removal of the ban on reopening of the District Testing Laboratory, and requesting funds for the District assessor so that a listing of tax-exempt real estate could be published for public distribution.

The unit disclosed plans for participation in the area Halloween celebration, and for the fifth annual association banquet to be held October 30 in Petworth Baptist Church.

2,400 District Guardsmen Are Reviewed In Parade Before Selective Service Officials

Capital's Militia Increased by 50% Since Last Inspection

Massed in solid battalions behind their colors, more than 2,400 District National Guardsmen last night passed in review before their commanding general in honor of officials who will administer registration for selective service today.

It was a National Guard grown more than 50 per cent since its last review in May, when some 1,700 officers and men formed on the Mall between Fourth and Sixth Streets Northwest. It was a guard hardened by three weeks in the field, knitted into a tighter fighting force by intensified discipline in the face of the threat of war.

In a sharp wind which swept across the floodlighted parade and wrestled with its guidons and banners, the guard's two regiments, two battalions and one one infantry company stood at attention while marksmanship trophies and service medals were presented. Then it passed in review before Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding, and the honor guests.

Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding the 121st Engineers, acted in command of troops. Orders were published by Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, assistant adjutant general, and trophies and medals were presented by Gen. Cox and by Col. Lewis B. Hershey, national selective service director. The District Commissioners were represented by Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner.

Rifle and pistol trophies were the Mosher Cup, presented to the State Detachment; the R. Harris & Co. Cup, to Capt. William I. Mushake, Company B, 121st Engineers; the Berry & Whitmore Team Skirmish Trophy, to Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment; the Company Team Trophy, to Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, and the Senatorial Trophy, to Lieut. Henry M. Boudinot, Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment.

Ten-year service medals with bar went to Capt. James H. Heizer, Headquarters Battery, 260th Coast Artillery; Capt. John T. O'Neill, Headquarters, 104th Quartermaster Regiment; Lieut. Calvin M. Pentecost, Battery A, 260th Coast Artillery; Lieut. Andrew G. Conlyn, Company A, 121st Engineers; Master Sergt. William E. Bahre, Headquarters Detachment, Twenty-ninth Division; Staff Sergt. Rolland R. Ruellman, Company A, 121st Engineers; Sergt. John R. Payne, Battery C, 260th Coast Artillery, and Private (First Class) Langdon P. McAninch, Medical Detachment, 104th Quartermaster Regiment.

Led by the band of the 121st Engineers, under Warrant Officer Meyer Goldman, the massed battalions swept past the reviewing stand, the 121st Engineers under Lieut. Col. Julian S. Oliff. In line behind the 121st, sabers of their officers flashing in salute, standards and guidons lowered as they passed the commanding general and his staff, were the First Battalion, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, commanded by Maj. F. F. Bernsdorff; the Twenty-ninth Division Special Troops, under Lieut. Col. William T. Roy; the 260th Coast Artillery, Col. Walter W. Burns, and Company A, 372d Infantry, Capt. Sylvester F. Blackwell.

Back to their armory marched the troops, from what probably was their last review before entering Federal service in January.

Congress Heights Citizens Launch Vigorous Campaign for Neighborhood Improvements

High on Their List Of Projects Sought Is New Library

This is the seventeenth article in a series about citizens associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

With a record of nearly half a century of service to the southeast Washington community south of St. Elizabeths Hospital, the Congress Heights Citizens Association will sponsor this year a vigorous program of neighborhood improvements.

Known originally as the Congress Heights Public Improvement Association, it has in the past waged successful fights for street car and bus service, new streets, water, lights and sewer systems. And it was directly responsible for the new Congress Heights School, at Fifth and Nichols Avenue Southeast, according to Secretary Edna G. Dulin.

Objectives for the coming year include the following community improvements:

1. A new library for the neighborhood, where such facilities are now virtually nonexistent, according to President Louis Gelbman.

2. Another bridge over the Anacostia River at South Capitol Street. This is being sought by three other citizens associations in the sector east of the river.

3. Extension of the Oxon Run sewer from Wheeler Road to the Maryland line. This was begun several years ago through the efforts of the association, Mrs. Dulin said, but never completed because of lack of funds.

4. Division of the Eleventh Police Precinct, which now serves the entire sector east of the Anacostia. Another precinct is needed in the area, the association thinks.

5. Opening of Fourth Street Southeast from Trenton to Valley Place.

6. Widening of Alabama Avenue Southeast from Nicholas to Good Hope Road.

The association, which serves the area together with the younger Progressive Citizens of Congress Heights Organization, is a member of the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Southeast Council and the Sousa Memorial Bridge Committee. Meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month in the Congress Heights School.

Officers include Mr. Gelbman, president; Benson Taylor, first vice president; Mrs. Maude Liebrand, second vice president; Mrs. Florence Read, treasurer, and Mrs. Dulin, secretary.

Bar Puts Off Action on Use Of Library

'Politics' Is Charged Behind Amendment To Extend Facility To Colored Lawyers

In a stormy session in which charges of "playing politics" were hurled, the District Bar Association last night voted to defer action on a proposed amendment to its by-laws to permit colored members of the bar to use its library in the District Court Building.

F. Regis Noel urged that the matter be laid on the table until after the national election because "there's a lot of politics in it."

"If they get this sop before the election, the story will go around that 'the President got it for us.'" he said. "I don't think the matter should be made a political football."

Carmody Hints at Coercion

His remarks set off a heated discussion. Sefton Darr, former president of the association, said if anybody were playing politics it was the man who had raised the question at this meeting.

John J. Carmody said he was "not convinced" that the action of the committee that formulated the proposed amendment was "freely made," and hinted at the possibility of "coercion." Henry I. Quinn urged that action be postponed because of present political implications.

William E. Richardson, chairman of the committee, explained that an arrangement had been worked out whereby the library space would be expanded to make room for use of nonmembers. They, if members of the bar in good standing, would, under the amendment, be granted library privileges for an annual fee of $8.

Wellford Urges Change

The expanded facilities "would give us a foothold when a new courthouse is built," Richardson said.

Richard E. Wellford, Paul E. Lesh and Julius I. Peyser, members of the committee, strongly urged that the amendment be adopted.

In answer to an implied charge of pressure from New Deal officials on the question, Lesh denied any such "intimidation."

The amendment will come before the association at its November meeting.

Ask New Police Judge

Recommendations for appointment of an additional judge for the Police Court and for an increase in the personnel of its probation office were made in a committee report, adopted by the association.

Carmody, chairman of the Police Court committee, read the report which pointed out that the four judges are the same number as in 1925, although the District population since then has increased approximately one-third and automobiles have increased in proportion, with a corresponding volume of cases in Traffic Court.

The report pointed out that the probation officer and six assistants each investigated an average of 725 cases in the past year.

Shattuck Talks on Draft

The committee stated its opposition of the "present form" of the bill introduced in the House to provide life tenure during good behavior and retirement salaries for judges of Police, Municipal and Juvnile Courts of the District. But this part of the committee report was not included in the vote of the association.

Maj. Edward S. Shattuck, of the legal division of the national selective service headquarters, made a brief address and answered questions on the Selective Service Act. The meeting was held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Women's Bar Unit Votes to Hold Study

The Women's Bar Association, at its first meeting of the season in the Mayflower, last night authorized the naming of a committee to investigate a proposed roundtable discussion of District practice and procedure.

A partially completed survey, reported by Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews and Mrs. Sallie Mero Williams, disclosed that in 41 States the bar association admits women on an equal basis. The District Bar Association is for male attorneys only.

The organization voted to join the Inter-American Bar Association. Mrs. Ernest Parkinson was elected to fill a vacancy on the board of directors. Officers were installed. They are Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, president; Mrs. Catherine Lawlor, vice president; Mrs. Cecil Roeder, secretary, and Miss Elizabeth V. Franzoni, treasurer.

Horse Has to Be Shot After Auto Hits It

A type of traffic accident that is fast becoming extinct in Washington was fatal late yesterday to a dray horse driven by Tom Brown, colored, 53, of 468 N street northwest, a huckster.

The horse was struck at Thirteenth and N Streets Northwest, by an automobile driven, police said, by Henry W. Amos, 48, of 1352 Longfellow Street Northwest.

Policeman R. P. Herlong, of the Traffic Department, shot the horse after determining that it had suffered a broken leg.

D.C. Naval Reserve Commended As Nation's Most Efficient Unit

1. CONGRATULATIONS—Assistant Secretary of Navy Lewis Compton congratulates Lieut. W. Croft Jennings, commander, First Battalion Naval Reserve, of Washington, for having the most efficient battalion in the Nation

2. INSPECTION—Compton inspects Washington's pride of the Naval Reserve. At ceremonies last night in the Naval Reserve Armory, the First Battalion received recognition for its 12-month record as being the most efficient battalion in the United States Naval Reserve

Officers and men of Washington's Naval Reserve organization—the First Battalion—were commended and decorated by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Lewis Compton last night in ceremonies at their armory in the Navy Yard.

The battalion received a plaque in recognition of its standing as the most efficient of the Nation's 36 Naval Reserve battalions during the past year.

"It certainly is a fine demonstration of the leadership you men have been under and the caliber of men you no doubt all are," said Compton in making the presentation.

Recalling that a Naval Reserve division which he once commanded was rated tenth best, he said:

"I was so puffed up I haven't gotten over it yet."

Looking around at the little armory, crowded by the uniformed battalion lined up at attention, Compton said he hoped the men would "soon have an adequate place to perform your weekly drills."

Assisting Compton in the presentation were Rear Admiral George T. Pettingill, commandant of the navy yard, and Commander Arthur B. McCrary, rtired, Naval Reserve director in the Washington area.

William Malloy, 11, of 2005 Jackson Street Northeast, struck when he ran across Jackson Street in the 1200 block, was taken to Providence Hospital with bruises and lacerations. Mary A. Rice, of Mount Rainier, Md., drove the car, police reported.

John Brosius, 70, of 2900 Q Street Northwest, suffered fractured ribs and shoulder and scalp lacerations as he crossed E Street Northwest in the 600 block. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital. Samuel L. Crump, of 1367 B Street Southeast, was listed by police as driver of the car which struck him.

6 Greenhouses Destroyed by Fire

An estimated 10,000 flowers and plants went up in smoke yesterday afternoon when fire roared through half a dozen greenhouses of Gude Bros. Co. at Mount Olivet Street and Bladensburg Road Southeast.

Firemen fought for more than two hours to control the flames, which started in a paint shop shortly after 4 p. m. The greenhouses' glass turned to liquid under the intense heat. Damage was estimated by firemen at $5,000.

Roll Call Here 40,000 Behind Goal

Volunteer Workers To Double Efforts For 130,000 Members By Saturday Night

Short of their goal by 40,000 members and faced with a Saturday night deadline, volunteer workers prepared last night to double their efforts and push over the top the 1940 Red Cross Roll Call, which seeks 130,000 Washington enrollees.

General Chairman Edgar Morris pointed out that while the drive is 9,667 behind last year and a daily average of 10,000 must be maintained, heavier returns are expected to follow the Government pay day and to bring the campaign to par.

The 100 per cent enrollments reported yesterday included L. Frank & Co. and George F. Muth Co., Inc.

Roll Call speaking programs scheduled today are as follows:

Mrs. Phillip Dodson, Women's Christian Temperance Union, 522 Sixth Street Northwest, 10:30 a. m.; Mrs. Helen Moodie, Soroptimist Club, Willard Hotel, 1 p. m.; Mrs. P. P. Powell, King-Smith School, 8 p. m.; Eugene Meyer, publisher, The Washington Post, WOL, 6:15 p. m.; Mrs. W. F. Pennoyer, WJSV, 3:30 p. m.

The Roll Call skit will be presented before the East Washington Optomst Club at the Capitol Park Hotel at 12:30 p. m. today. Mrs. Moodie will stress the work of Red Cross volunteer service in the talk before the Soroptimist Club, and Mrs. Pennoyer will describe the activities of the Junior Red Cross.

Meanwhile, it was announced here yesterday that shipments of a quantity of foodstufls, medicines and clothing were begun by the American Red Cross for war-ravaged and famine-stricken Chinese. Five hundred tons of rice and cracked wheat were shipped yesterday on the American Mail Line steamship Collingsworth from Seattle, destined for Shanghai. An American Red Cross advisory committee in China will arrange distribution to needy Chinese.

The District Red Cross Chapter yesterday revealed plans for recruiting 200 additional first line volunteer first aid instructors in expanding its program in first aid instruction.

Replaces Tex. A. & M. In Lead; Michigan 3d, Buckeyes 4th; Hoyas, S. M. U. 23d

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—Cornell's veteran football team, which has started its 1940 campaign even more impressively than it finished its all-winning 1939 season, won some "paper profits" today when the Nation's sports editors voted the Big Red the No. 1 team in the country.

In the first of the year's Associated Press ranking polls, 90 of 136 votes placed Cornell at the top. Thus the Ithacans, unscored on in two major games in which they piled up 79 points, took the lead over Texas A. and M., the team voted best last year.

Cornell polled 1,396 points. Of the 68 first-place votes they missed, 25 went to Texas A. and M., with 1,015 points, and 26 to Michigan, with 1,004.

Notre Dame Sixth

The East and Midwest dominate the first ten. Besides Cornell, Boston College in eighth place and Pennsylvania in ninth represent the Atlantic seaboard. Back of Michigan for the Midwest come Northwestern, 898 points for fourth; Notre Dame, 753 for sixth, and Minnesota, 630 for seventh.

The South, with Tennessee's 772 points for fifth place, and the Pacific Coast, with Stanford's 267 for tenth, round out the leading ten. Stanford, operating under Clark Shaughnessy for the first time, is the Far West's only all-winning eleven.

Each of the top ten, except for Boston College, matched with Idaho, will have to go all-out Saturday to defend its ranking.

Cornell vs. Syracuse

Cornell tackles Syracuse, last team to whip the Big Red, in 1938; the Texas Aggies face Texas Christian; Michigan sends its Tommy Harmon against Illinois, which shackled the all-American a year ago, and Northwestern and Bill DeCorrevont play Wisconsin.

Headline battle in the Southeast Conference and possibly in the Nation will be that between Tennessee and Alabama. Notre Dame always gets more than a workout from Carnegie Tech; Minnesota, with an extra week's rest, may need it to get by Ohio State; Penn tackles Princeton and Stanford hooks up with Washington State.

The rankings (points figured on 10-9-8-7-6, etc., basis, first-place votes in parentheses):

First ten

1—Cornell (90)	1,396
2—Texas A. and M. (25)	1,015
3—Michigan (26)	1,004
4—Northwestern (1)	898
5—Tennessee (7)	772
6—Notre Dame (5)	753
7—Minnesota (2)	630
8—Boston College	449
9—Pennsylvania	354
10—Stanford	267

Second ten: 11—Fordham, 195; 12—Clemson, 160; 13—Mississippi, 124; 14—Texas, 99; 15—Ohio State, 82; 16—Washington, 72; 17—Southern California, 34; 18—Oregon State, 32; 19—Washington State, 23; 20—Iowa, 22.

Also ran: Alabama, 17; Nebraska, 16; Georgetown and Southern Methodist 16 each. Rice and North Carolina 12 each, Duquesne 8, Holy Cross and Navy 6 each, Virginia and Michigan State 2 each, Villanova 1.

Pat Comiskey Wins Decision Over Cooper

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 15.—In his first ring appearance since being knocked out in one round by Max Baer, Pat Comisky tonight jabbed and hammered out a 10-round decision over Henry Cooper, of Brooklyn.

The youthful Paterson, N. J., hevayweight displayed a fast and snappy left jab and used it to good advantage in cutting Cooper, who weighed 194, about the face and right eye. Pat, who tipped the scale at 203, landed many sharp rights on Cooper's jaw but failed to drop the Brooklyn battler.

Cooper was shaken up badly at times by Pat's blows during the not too terrific battle. Comiskey seemed to have recovered completely from the Baer beating and moved about with agility while shooting blows at Cooper.

Don't be afraid, little girl, this fierce-looking redskin is only a dummy, built and decorated by Miss Margaret Dickey's art class at Anacostia High School. It's purpose is to provide a check on Anacostia's football victories this year, each triumph being indicated by a feather in Big Chief's headdress. The one worn here is for a swamping of Woodrow Wilson last week. Talent Enjoys Big Day; Five Favorites Win

Winner of Feature Comes From Behind To Pay His Backers A $4.90 Mutuel

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 15.—The favorite players who were beginning to believe they would never smile again, clicked today in no uncertain terms when the public choices won the first five races on the program. The line-up of successful favorites included A. E. Pierce's Panorascope operating in the Kent Purse, outstanding event on the Tuesday program.

The son of Carlaris and Gayoso came from behind the pacemakers to win by a half length in a driving finish of the test of a mile and a sixteenth. E. G. Hackney's honest-running Tony Steel was second, three parts of a length ahead of K. D. Kolseth's Microphobia. Only two others competed in the $1,200 race.

Victor Brings $4.90 Ticket

In winning his second purse of the year in 19 starts, Panorascope paid $4.90 while under good handling by Apprentice Jockey J. Mearle. The winner's time for the route was 1:46 1-5 over a fast track.

The crowd of 8,000 saw Tony Steel go to the front nearing the first turn. The Sir Graysteel gelding, however, was "dogged" by Predicate. Mearle elected to sit tight with Panorascope on the outside and close up. Predicate finally had enough and Tony Steel went into a drive gamely. Microphobia came up menacingly on the rail. But, once under pressure, Panorascope was not to be denied. He pushed up on the outside and was going away in approved fashion at the end.

Iron Shot Winner.

The favorite parade ended in the sixth race, but the winner was second choice in the wagering. Joseph E. Widener's Iron Shot lived up to his name and came from last position with a bold rush that accounted for first money. Dollar Bay was second and Roncat, the favorite, finished third. A field of 11 fair routers competed over the mile and a sixteenth course. The winner paid $9.90.

Daily double stock shrunk to a mere $19.40 payoff due to victories in the key races of heavily played horses. Col. E. R. Bradley's green and white colors were triumphant in the first event, Bryan Station winning easily and paying $4.20. Happy Pilot put the finishing touches on the transaction in the third race, scoring with a $6.80 price tag attached.

Redskins, Etc., Riddle Post's Picture Staff

Harry Goodwin Stopped By Baugh; Miller Hurt Chasing Prowler

Memo to the Redskins:

Maybe you're not entirely to blame, fellahs, but The Post's photographic ranks today are depleted to the extent of one good journeyman cameraman and one chief of its photographic staff.

To start off, Harry Goodwin, assigned to the Redskins-Cardinals game last Sunday will not be available for your next two games, at least. It seems Goodwin got all tangled up with Sammy Baugh after Baugh was run out of bounds on a play. Your man Baugh helped Harry up and mumbled "Sorry, old man." That set matters all right until the next morning a doctor discovered Goodwin had a broken right arm and there was some resetting to be done.

That isn't all. Our photographic boss, Mr. Hugh Miller, who was also at your game, was so impressed with the efficiency of the Redskin tackling that he tried it all by himself early yesterday morning—on a prowler near his home. He missed the tackle and slid into Emergency Hospital with a fractured right knee.

We just thought we'd call these matters to your attention.

Colgate Perfecting Air Game for Duke

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 15 (AP).—Coach Kerr sent his Colgate football squad through a lengthy scrimmage session today, utilizing the drill to develop an overhead game which he expects to use against Duke University's Blue Devils on Saturday.

Saturday's game against the powerful Southern eleven will mark the fiftieth anniversary of football at Colgate.

Apparently Kerr plans to place the burden of passing on the shoulders of Jo-Jo McCourt and Sophomore Ed Phinney, both of whom starred in the "overhead" game against Brown last week.

Indian Spring Club Stages Varied Program

Indian Spring Club members have planned a varied card for the field day today with Jack Redmond's exhibition at 4:30 climaxing the program.

Driving, pitching, putting and club throwing contests and a handicap tournament are included on the all-day card.

Riverside Fight Date Is Approved

D. C. Commission Gives Alvis Permission for Boyd-Moore 10-Rounder

Promoter Joe Turner lost his duel with Riverside Stadium moguls yesterday as the District Boxing Commission approved the latter's application for a permit to stage a ten-round fight, featuring Buddy Moore and Bill Boyd October 28.

Turner, who has had a monopoly on Monday night fight dates since the failure of Jimmy Erwin's boxing enterprise at Riverside last spring, applied for the October 28 date on the heels of an announcement from Ray Alvis that he was planning to step into the field.

Early in the year, the commission gave Turner its promise to grant him exclusive rights to Monday night boxing shows, but in the action yesterday stated that Turner had informed the commission he planned no fight programs in October.

First Come, First Served

"The commission had before it an application for individual boxing show from Promoter S. G. Leoffler for Riverside Stadium, Monday, October 28, and also a similar application from Promoter Joe Turner for the same date," Secretary Harvey L. Miller said.

"Assistant Secretary Josephine Sawaya reported that Promoter Leoffler's application was filed at 9 a. m., October 14, and that Promoter Turner's application came in two hours later.

"After giving careful consideration to all the facts and circumstances, it was decided that in view of the application of Promoter Leoffler having been filed prior to the application of Promoter Turner, the commission approved the first application."

Leoffler's application, based on a permit for a Moore-Boyd fight, belies Ray Alvis' announcement that he was interested only in "big time" boxing productions.

Boyd No Attraction

Alvis had announced that he would not take part in any fight promotion that did not involve any of the topnotch fighters and "certainly not anything that will not draw at least $5,000."

Boyd, knocked out by almost any heavyweight you care to name, is considered nothing more than a washed up ex-protege of Jack Dempsey at the present time, while Moore, a colored boy known as "Joe Louis' double," is just arriving on the scene.

Moore crashed into the boxing picture on the Billy Conn-Bob Pastor fight show in Madison Square Garden by scoring a 24-second knockout and then came to Washington on the Henry Armstrong-Phil Furr card to knock out Maynard Daniels in the first of a scheduled six-round battle.

The colored fighter did show a tremendous amount of punch, and a Boyd-Moore show probably would be no more than a repetition of the long-remembered Natie Mann-Buck Everett fight staged by Erwin in Riverside last spring.

Meanwhile, Gabe Menendez, Turner's matchmaker, was in New York yesterday attempting to line up shows for the fall program at Turner's Arena for the second, third and fourth weeks in November.

Conn Signs for Nontitle Go With Clarence Jones

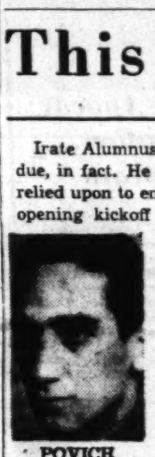
New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Promoter Charley Murray, of Buffalo, today signed Lightweight Champion Billy Conn to meet Clarence Jones, Buffalo Negro light-heavy, in a 15-round over-the-weight bout in Buffalo's new Memorial Stadium, November 18.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 16, 1940

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Irate Alumnus has his pen in hand again. He was long overdue, in fact. He is strictly a football season cocoon who can be relied upon to emerge from his chrysalis state with the season's opening kickoff and scan the sport pages for any aspersion, intended or otherwise, on his Alma Mater.



POVICH

From long experience we can detect the letters of Irate Alumnus in the morning mail while they are yet sealed. As an old addressee, we have made something of a study of the dispatches of outraged subscribers. In your hand the letters bristle even before they can be perused. Close inspection will sometimes reveal a heavy, erect nap on the paper of the envelope like the arched back of a rabied cat ready to spit. Irate Alumnus somehow succeeds in transferring to the physical aspects of his letter at least a measure of his rage. Usually the mere opening of the letter is a task. With anything less than the sharpest penknife, it is a struggle.

We point this out merely to cite the definite personality of the pan letter even in its unopened state. In refreshing contrast are the scads and scads of fan letters which begin with "Dear Mr. Povich. Your column is the light of my life. I think it is wunnerful." Those letters fairly leap out of the envelope, honest.

Irate Alumnus doesn't like us today because in a moment of attempted levity the other morning we tried to portray the horrible state of football at Dartmouth by stating that the Big Green was licked "by some sort of a college called Franklin and Marshall." You guessed it—Mr. Dick Musser, of 3422 Georgia Avenue, is an alumnus of Franklin and Marshall and very naturally resented the implication.

"Why call F. & M. 'some sort of college,'" Mr. Musser demands with perfect propriety "The school is primarily an educational institution and not a base for a traveling theatrical troup as so many of our 'universities' have become. There are other standards than winning football games and Franklin and Marshall is pretty close to the top when judged by those standards.

"Franklin and Marshall has had a continuous existence since 1789 when it was founded by Benjamin Franklin. It was consolidated with Marshall College which had been started a few years later at Mercersburg by the then Chief Justice Marshall (hence its traditional relationship with the University of Richmond).

"F. & M. has a limited enrollment of students and has never stooped to going up around Scranton and Wilkes-Barre to pick up a bunch of coal miners to bolster a false glory—let the others do that—being satisfied to go on its meritorious way of building men, generation after generation.

"And another thing. There are no 40-year-old football bums who claim F. & M. as their Alma Mater, loafing around gin mills and cadging beer-dimes on previous headline glory, a claim that other colleges cannot make. Have I set you right?"

Yep.

And now we come to Yale's announcement of a new football policy: Deemphasis of the game at the hallowed New Haven university. At first glance, the announcement by Athletic Director Ogden Miller seems quite superfluous. Penn sort of deemphasized Yale football with its 50-to-7 victory over the Elis last Saturday.

The real surprise will occur some day when a college that has been doing very well for itself on the football field decides to deemphasize the game. Thus far, with the exception of Pitt, whose stated policy of deemphasis hasn't been quite apparent, the only schools that have decided to chuck big-time football are those whose teams were being kicked around. Chicago didn't abandon football at a time when it was a power in the Big Ten. No indeedy. The Maroons gave up when they found they couldn't win. That is what has been happening to the Elis lately—they not only couldn't win, but they had just absorbed their worst defeat of their football history.

One of the reasons Yale is quitting the big leagues of football, according to Athletic Director Miller is that "Big-time football doesn't increase the educational stature of any institution." Well, if true, somebody at Yale was a long time finding it out. Yale has been playing big time football for most of 63 years. Maybe they shouldn't trust snap judgment.

American U. Ace Also Job Agent

Hugo (Dutch) Schulze, athlete extraordinary at American University, also has business talents beyond the ordinary, it seems. Schulze has successfully inaugurated a Student Employment Agency to obtain part-time work for needy athletes and other students of American University.

Schulze, captain of the Eagles' basketball team and a star end on the football eleven, will provide man or even woman power to do any sort of odd jobs, such as caring for the baby, washing windows or automobiles, mowing lawns, etc.

Schulze makes it plain, however, that his agency won't specialize seavily in escort service, but that all babies requiring care must be over 18 years of age.

Central, Tech Meet for 38th Time on Grid

Interhigh Contest Set Tomorrow At Griffith Stadium

By Bill Burnett

Thirty-eight years after the birth of their rivalry back in 1902, Central and Tech High grid terms find themselves all even in victories as the '40 edition of the annual scrap looms tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium.

Each team up to this point in the rivalry has won 16 games, 5 have been ties and 1 engagement—that of 1918—was called off due to an influenza epidemic. With a few scattered exceptions, every game was closely contested, 14 of them winding up with six points or less separating the teams. Lowest-scoring clash was that of 1913, when the McKinleyites eked out a 3-0 victory.

Eccentric Stars

This year's game, the first ever to be played at night, promises to be as exciting as any in the long series, not only because of the similarity of the teams' records over the past 38 years, but because of their almost identical strength this year. Going into the affair, neither holds an appreciable edge. If either wins by more than one touchdown there should be a Congressional investigation.

Following out the "sameness" theme, both Central and Tech this year boast at least one player who might rank up there with the fanciest schoolboy eccentrics of all time. They're the sort of youngsters who give schoolboy football its color, though they would be good football players without their eccentricities.

Tech's young Corrigan is 190-pound Carleton Smallwood, a backfield man performing with the Trainers' regular team for the first year. A transfer from Hyattsville High, he has one big talent, from a football standpoint—running with the ball.

Was Doubtful Starter

It is Smallwood's deep-set conviction that, given a chunk of pigskin to carry and ground under his feet, there is nobody who can stop him in a reasonable space. He also fails to see the purpose of all this seriousness about football. Coach Artie Wondrack should be gray-haired by now—if he had it to turn gray—trying to stop Carleton's practical joking.

There was considerable fear at Tech earlier in the week that Smallwood would be unable to play tomorrow. In machine class he hurt his eyes looking at an acetylene

Henry Armstrong's First Operation Proves Success

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 15.—Henry Armstrong, former world featherweight, lightweight and welterweight boxing champion, today submitted to the first of two operations that he hopes will put him in shape for further ring warfare.

Scar tissue was removed from his left eyebrow and a droop in his eyelid was corrected during an operation performed by Dr. Alexander Schiff.

Similar work will be done on Armstrong's right eye in a few days, after which he will rest until the incisions have healed completely, then he will go into training for a return engagement on January 17 with Fritzie Zivic, of Pittsburgh, who relieved him of his welter crown—last of his three titles—ten days ago.

REDSKIN SCORING PLAY NO. 4:

The Wide Reverse Run

This wide reverse, used when the defensive is playing too wide or sliding in the direction of the backfield formation, is illegal in college football because original ball carrier passes ball forward to another back less than 5 yards behind line of scrimmage.

1. Offensive No. 2 back (25), guard (18) and tackle (17) pull out of line, and No. 3 back starts around own right end . . .

2. . . . as the wingback (13) whirls and starts to his left to take the ball from the No. 3 back, who fakes to draw the defensive out with him.

3. Meanwhile, No. 4 back (49 at top of picture) takes out defensive right end as the new ball carrier picks up interference . . .

4. . . . and prepares to follow his interferer (17) as his other blocker (25) drives toward the defensive left halfback.

5. With his left end (19) coming across the field to block the safety man, the ball carrier cuts sharply through the hole.

Baugh to Get Rest Sunday as Redskin Rookies Take Over

Passing Star May See but Little Action

New Players to Get Heavy Duty Against Philadelphia Eagles, Redskin Coach Says

The Redskins' "big Bertha"—Sammy Baugh, if you didn't know—is going to get a rest next Sunday, despite the fact that the passing artist from Sweetwater, Tex., is hurtling along at a record-smashing pace in the National Pro League.

When the Skins go to Philadelphia to take on the Eagles, it'll be the rookie backs and linemen who'll carry the load, come rain or snow. Baugh will play, but he'll get more than an ordinar dose of help from Ray Zimmerman, rookie triple threater.

All this is disclosed by Coach Ray Flaherty, who in rather tight-lipped fashion yesterday says that the new men are in for a real baptism of fire.

"They're going to see a lot more action than they ever dreamed of, and I don't care how the game happens to be going," Flaherty said. "I'll probably run them as a backfield unit from time to time, but we're going to keep alternating them all during the game with veterans.

Coach Disappointed

While Flaherty didn't go into the details, the general impression was that he was far from happy over the spirit of the seasoned men in the Cardinal game last Sunday.

And with Baugh just about as near perfect as possible with a record of 40 completions in 57 attempts so far this year, Flaherty is anxious to conserve this weapon for the more strenuous tests to come.

Zimmerman, tailback from San Jose State, is expected to be Baugh's stand-in for the Philadelphia game.

Baugh, far in advance of the National League's passing pack, has set a dizzy pace for his teammate, Frank Filchock, who was the league's most efficient passer last season, and Zimmerman, hailed as a great adjunct to the Skins' aerial game, hardly has been called upon for any aerial combat.

Baugh's uncanny record in four league games this year has him on the way to breaking at least three all-time marks in professional football.

Sammy's 40 completions have piled up a total of 556 yards for the Redskins this year. His average of 10 completions for 139 yards per game is one completion and 19 yards ahead of the records set last season by Cleveland's Parker Hall and Philadelphia's Davy O'Brien.

O'Brien Second

While O'Brien is second in the league passing race with 53 completions in 120 attempts, Hall is down in sixth place. Cecil Isbell, of Green Bay, with 29 completions in 62 attempts, is third.

The Skins' Fullback Jimmy Johnston will get more rest this week, with Rookie Bob Seymour stepping into his shoes. Johnston, with four touchdowns, is tied with Philadelphia's Don Looney and Green Bay's Carl Mulleneaux for the scoring lead.

Flaherty plans to operate with Zimmerman and Seymour in the tailback positions, and Bob Hoffman and Ray Hare in the blocking spots in his backfield. In the line, Bob Fisher, rookie guard; Sandy Sanford, rookie end; Bob Titchenal, center and a San Jose mate of Zimmerman's, and Steve Andrake, reserve rookie center, are expected to see a lot of action against the Eagles.

The Redskins will turn out at Griffith Stadium this morning at 9:30 o'clock and study motion pictures of their play last Sunday tonight.

BILL MULVEY BILL GRIFFIN

Catholic U. Players Not Related But Are Inseperable Friends; They're Built Alike, Are Same Age and Almost Identical in All Respects

By Jack Munhall.

Bill Mulvey and Bill Griffin may or may not achieve lasting football fame at Catholic University but at least they share some sort of honor—that of looking so much alike that even Coach Dutch Bergman has difficulty telling them apart in their grid uniforms.

In no way related and having little in common except Irish heritage, Mulvey and Griffin stack up as follows:

Each is 20 years of age. Each is a junior classman. Each is a halfback candidate. Each is an even 6 feet tall and weighs 190 pounds. Each wears a size 10 shoe and a size 7⅛ helmet. And each is good looking in a masculine, Irish way. Moreover, there is only one-half inch difference in their waist and chest measurements, Mulvey holding the edge with a 39½-inch chest and a 34½-inch waist.

Could Pass for Brothers

Nor does the similiarity of the two end there, for they even look enough alike in the face and head to pass for brothers. Both have dark eyes, and dark, tousled hair and round-shaped heads. From the back it is most difficult to distinguish them, and when they are in uniform with their heads and foreheads covered by helmets it is almost impossible to do so.

As if you hadn't guessed it, the two Bills are inseparable friends. Roommates last year, they are taking the same AB course and occupy adjoining seats in the classroom whenever possible.

Both Are Backs

It would add greatly to the story if Mulvey and Griffin, in contrast to their intimate friendship were bitter rivals on the gridiron. But that is not so. Mulvey is a left halfback, and Griffin a right halfback.

However, in line with the yarn each picked last week's game with St. Anselm to give one of his best varsity performances. Griffin made one of the game's longest runs, an 18-yard jaunt, and otherwise acquitted himself creditably, while Mulvey cracked away at the Hawks' line all afternoon for consistently good gains.

And so ends this story of the unrelated twins who probably will continue close friends until both start courting the same Trinity girl.

Mrs. Clark Is President's Plate Winner

Scores Net 78 to Win At Columbia Club; Mrs. Walper Victor

Mrs. David Clark, Army and Navy Club champion, won the President's Plate tournament yesterday at Columbia Country Club in the annual event for the past presidents and present officers of the District Women's Golf Association.

Mrs. Clark, who went to the semi-finals of the Middle Atlantic championship last week, played each nine in 42 for a gross 84 and deducted six handicap strokes for a net 78, winning by a five-stroke margin. Mrs. Clark was 4, 4, 4, 3, even men's par for the four tough starting holes. The winner is a member of the rules committee.

Mrs. Leo Walper came in for gross honors with a 43,40—83, winning by two strokes over Mrs. Betty Meckley, Kenwood, who posted an 85.

Mrs. A. A. McEntee, Kenwood, won second low net in a draw from Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. F. L. Williams, Argyle. Mrs. McEntee scored 94, 11—83; Mrs. Meckley, 85, 2—83, and Mrs. Williams, 106, 23—83.

Fifth low net also was a tie with Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, 88,4—84, winning over Mrs. Judson Dale, 94, 10—84, in the draw. The only past president in the prize list, Mrs. J. R. DeFarges, of the host club, scored 106, 21—85, to win in the draw over Mrs. Davis Weir, Congressional, 101, 16—85, and Mrs. M. K. Barroll, Army and Navy, 95, 10—85.

Three others in a deadlock at net 86s completed the prize list: Mrs. L. F. Hurley, Columbia, 110, 24—86; Mrs. Charles L. Vaile, Kenwood, 100, 14—86, and Mrs. D. S. Platt, Manor, 107, 21—86.

Principal topic of the luncheon that followed was the coming election of the association.

Terror Soccermen To Open Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 16.—The Western Maryland soccer team will make its 1940 home debut today when it meets the Gettysburg Bullets on Hoffa Field. Dr. Walter Nathan has the Terrors in fine shape following their season opener, which they dropped to the Penn State Nittany Lions, 3 to 0.

Against the Bullets, Nathan will send ten lettermen, although all may not be in the starting line-up. Warren Cook, spending his first year on the varsity, and Mac McWilliams, a reserve last year, are pressing the regulars for their posts and will see action today.

Hershey Bears Sign Toronto Defenseman

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 15 (AP).—The Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League announced tonight the acquisition of Johnny (Red) Doran, of Toronto, defenseman with the Providence Reds of the same league last year.

Doran took the defensemen's scoring honors last season with 14 goals and 19 assists.

Charles Town Ready for Opening Dec. 2

Condition Book to Be Out in 10 Days; Fine Talent Expected

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 15.—The Charles Town Jockey Club's autumn meeting at Charles Town, Jefferson County, W. Va., will be made up of 18 racing days, with the sport getting under way on Monday, December 2, and ending on Saturday, December 21. These dates were approved yesterday by the West Virginia State Racing Commission, of which Beverley Broun, of Charleston, W. Va., is chairman, and Carl O. Schmidt, of Wheeling, and Frank Brooke, of Charles Town, are associates. The condition book for the first part of the meeting will be off the press within the next ten days and will be given immediate distribution over a wide area. The first draft of this book already has been submitted to A. J. Boyle, president-manager of the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc., by Racing Secretary Fred Burton.

With every indication that the class of horses available for the 18 days of racing at the picturesque and popular Charles Town course will be vastly higher than any track under a mile in circumference has been able to offer in many a year, it is expected that the meeting will prove unusually attractive Burton, in fashioning conditions, has amied at bringing out in the vast majority of the races the better grade racers. Special emphasis also has been placed on contests over distances ranging from a mile and a sixteenth to a mile and a quarter.

Owners and trainers are urged, in event they are entertaining plans of campaigning their horses in December at Charels Town, to file immediately requests for stall reservations.

Del Baker Drives Gift Auto to Coast

Detroit, Oct. 15 (INS).—Del Baker was bound for the West Coast tonight, driving a new automobile presented him by Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Tigers.

Baker, who piloted the Tigers to the American League pennant, was given the automobile as a bonus, and was also handed a contract—calling for a "substantial" raise—to pilot the Tigers next year. Terms of the contract were not made public.

Hyattsville Girls Hockey Victors

The Hyattsville High School girls' field hockey team, using 22 players, downed Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 2-0, yesterday for its second victory in as many starts. Manager Frances Brelsford, center-forward, scored the first goal in the first period, and Substitute Dorothy Rice tallied the other point in the final quarter.

Len Eshmont Promising as Pass Receiver

Fordham Star May Be Seen in New Role Against Pittsburgh

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—Len Eshmont, Fordham's crack running back, may blossom out as a pass receiver when the Rams play Pitt next Saturday. Eshmont caught one pass in last week's Tulane game so neatly that Coach Jimmy Crowley decided to use him oftener in that role and today the Rams worked long and hard on aerial plays with Len on the receiving end. Crowley announced that his line-up would be unchanged for the Pitt game. The Fordham squad of 30 leaves New York Thursday.

Lions Test Defense

New York.—Columbia staged an intensive session on defense against Georgia plays followed by an hour's signal drill under floodlights. The timing of the Lions attack still caused Coach Lou Little some concern as did the absence of Triple-threat Ken Germann and Justin McIntyre, guard, who are doubtful starters Saturday.

Injuries Hit Army

West Point, N. Y.—Coach Bill Wood's worries over the injury-riddled Army backfield were increased when he learned that Johnny Hatch's lame ankle will not be healed enough for him to play against Harvard. He said, however, that the line that started against Cornell will remain unchanged.

Harvard Works Hard

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard had a rugged workout with much of the contact work being devoted to defense against Army plays. Bill Brown was moved up to first-string fullback, replacing Mort Waldstein. Sheldon Dietz, starting center, and Fran Lee, right halfback, were kept out of the heavy work because of bruises.

Elis Shine in Drill

New Haven, Conn.—If Yale's varsity goes as well against Dartmouth Saturday as it did in today's scrimmage, the Elis stand a fine chance of winning. The varsity was on defense through most of the session and stopped the Jayvees' "Dartmouth" plays cold. Hovey Seymour and Ray Anderson donned uniforms for light workouts.

Jockeys to Appear In Investigation Of Barba Death

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 15.—Every jockey who rode in the race that resulted in injuries which claimed the life of Jockey Johnny Barba will be summoned to appear Thursday at the office of District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan of Queens County. The death of Barba, who received the injuries on October 7, is being investigated.

Horsemen Hit Jackpot At Saratoga Sales

Our Boots, Level Best Are Leading Yearlings Procured in 1939; Half Of Best Performers From Spa

By Sid Feder.
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 15.—The biggest gamble in sports has hit the jackpot this year.

For those who took a chance and bid in yearling thoroughbreds at the Saratoga Sales in 1939, the dice have rolled nothing but sevents in the racing world, compiling one of the most remarkable records the "hoss auctions" have ever boasted.

The leading contenders for king and queen of the 2-year-olds of 1940, Our Boots and Level Best, both came out of the yearling sales ring. They went under the hammer for a total of $11,100, and, to date, have earned the neat sum of $102,750, which will buy a lot of oats for even the hungriest galloper.

Thirteen of the 26 leading juveniles who have collected $9,000 or more each during the year's racing were bid in at Saratoga a year ago, which is a pretty fair average, when you consider that 5,000 geegees go to the post over a year and only one-fifth of these are yearling sales purchases.

The 13 out of the sales ring have won 23 stakes and earned $306,902, a record that doesn't sit too well with the horsemen who do their own breeding and racing. The top 13 from this latter group have collected $304,185 and hit the wire on top in 20 stakes.

Off his Belmont Futurity victory, Our Boots is generally regarded as most likely to succeed Bimelech on the throne of the 2-year-olds. He was picked up last year by Royce G. Martin, of Toledo, and, up to now, in winning three and finishing third once in four outings, he has collected $68,850. Level Best, a flying daughter of Equipoise, was walked out of the sales ring by Crispin Oglebay, of Chicago, for $7,680. She has won five stakes to date from colts and fillies alike, has

Kentucky's Touch Football Proves A Slam-Bang Game

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 15.—Touch football—that supposedly gentle offspring of the knock-down drag-out regular variety—is taboo at the University of Kentucky because it is too rough.

Instead of tackling, touch football players merely "tag" the runner and he must stop.

But, says C. Hakensmith, head of intramural sports at the university who eliminated the game, more participants have been injured than in regular football. Some even required hospitalization.

Most injuries resulted from falls by ball carriers. And then, the "tag" sometimes developed into a haymaker swing with enough power to pulverize the runner.

On the Line . . . . . With Considine

CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 15.—Sportin' around:

Brooklyn baseball fans should save their raucous "birds" until next April. For their old pal, Will Terry, will coach his Giants from third base next year, after Pancho Snyder is released. The Giants, by the way, will get Don Padgett and maybe Kirby Higbe . . . In the picture, "Knute Rockne—All American," Pat O'Brien moans, "If I could only get a back like Jim Thorpe," but if he had kept his eyes open in the film he could have had Thorpe easily—for the grizzled old Indian has an anonymous bit part in the film. He opens the door of the locker-room, sticks in his head and grunts, "Two minutes, Rock!"

Eddie Mead, manager of Henry Armstrong, says that Armstrong wasn't badly hurt in the Zivic fight. He bruised easily, that's all. Henry's eyes puffed up so much that after the tenth Mead had to pry one of the closed lids apart about a quarter of an inch, so Armstrong could find Zivic.

"It was the gamest exhibition I've ever seen in the ring," Mead told us today. "And about the smartest. When he couldn't see him, Armstrong would feel his way along, with almost as much accuracy. I wanted to stop the fight in the twelfth, but when I told Henry he said, 'Why stop it; I'm not losing, am I?' I said, 'Of course, you're not losing,' and I meant it. That Zivic looked like he was just in there trying to go the distance. The gamblers were laying 15-to-1 on Armstrong after the tenth. I still think Henry's stumble and fall at the end decided the judges' minds."

Yale, snorting purity, will not do a Chicago U. . . . Navy has only six first classmen, or seniors, on its regular team. It looks like the best Navy team in years . . . Wonder who deemphasized Yale more, the school's athletic department or Penn? . . . John Harrell, 208-pound Navy player, was amateur heavyweight rassling champion at Oklahoma A. and M. . . . A number of letters and postcards have come in nominating Jimmy Wilson as the National League's most valuable player. Suits us . . . Red Kress' release by the Tigers, to take the St. Paul job, opens a place for Steve O'Neill, former manager of the Indians . . . That famed epicure and host extraordinaire, Tony Galento, has opened a bigger saloon, with a special electric eye device that will keep out his bottle-swinging brother.

Herbert Bayard Swope's message to the horse-betting public, just released, was a marvel of clean-cut writing. The New York State treasury realized $600,000 out of racing under the bookmaking system last year. Now, with 21 days to go, the State revenue has gone over the $5,200,000 mark. Swope admits that the caliber of horses used in New York has declined, as has the "form," and hopes to do something about it. He calls for bigger purses, the absorption by the tracks of a possible Federal tax on mutuel handle, and hammers again at his old complaint: That bettors should be paid off down to the penny. "Breakage"—the odd pennies which are kept by the tracks for the "convenience" of bettors—already has amounted to $679,800 in New York.

Incidentally, up until October 7, $69,924 worth of uncashed tickets were still, well, uncashed. Swope thinks it would be a good idea to make of this uncalled-for money a fund, to take care of the indigent and infirm of racing. Good idea.

Don Budge was plenty sick in Kansas City last week. Scarletina . . . Jock Sutherland is perfectly contented, in pro ball . . . Hot after a match with Billy Conn are Red Burman, who wants to fight him as a heavyweight, and Jimmy Reeves, crack Negro battler, who wants to fight Willie for the lightheavyweight title . . . Conn recently turned down a Mike Jacobs offer to pit him against Lee Savold . . . Paul Moss, Billy Soose's manager, is flooding the country with postcard queries, asking "Who is the middleweight champion of the world?" Seems that Soose beat Ken Overlin and Tony Zale, both claimants, in over-the-weight matches . . . Jimmy Isaminger, the veteran Philadelphia baseball writer who suffered a stroke in Cleveland near the end of the season, is on the mend.

Judge Landis had one of the series stars on the mat, after the player had blown his series cut in a dice game . . . Most mannerly football fan in the country tried to rally thebeaten forces of Harvard last Saturday with plaintive, erudite calls of "Resist, Harvard! Resist!" . . . The Washington Redskins are getting ready to enlarge their press accommodations at Griffith Stadium, for the December 8 playoff game with the winner of the Western Division of the league . . . Brooklyn papers please copy.

It was terrible to read of the death of Lieut. James E. Mather, a Washington boy, in that fiery crash at Salt Lake City He was a great kid, a fine athlete, and they liked him so much at West Point that they want him buried there, to sleep forever on the peaceful land that looks down the Hudson.

Favorite Players Are Still Suffering as Third Covey Joins Long List of Flops

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 15.—As if they hadn't already absorbed enough punishment, the battered ranks of favorite players came in for one of their most stunning setbacks with the running of the Sennings Park (Class "C") Handicap here today. H. P. Headley's Third Covey, victorious in his last two outings, could do no better than third in the field of five, with odds of 85 cents on the dollar hung out against him. He was the forty-fifth losing choice out of 54 at the meeting.

The purse went to Herbert M. Woolf's Robert L., in a photo duel with C. G. McCullagh's Archworth. Third Covey was beaten eight lengths while barely nosing out Count d'Or for the show. Star Chance was last. Robert L., giving Jockey R. L. Vedder two straight triumphs, paid $8.80 and ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 2-5. A crowd of 9,080 watched the event under heavy skies.

Archworth, a fast sprinter, held on surprisingly well. He dashed into a five lengths early lead and maintained a wide advantage for more than six furlongs. Third Covey, meanwhile, had sampled the pace and then dropped back. Robert L., set out after the leader around the final bend. He finally drew alongside Archworth inside the last furlong but had to give his all to prevail in a bitter duel. Third Covey outlasted Count d'Or for third money.

Stairs was the flopping favorite in the sixth. The mare played second fiddle to Generalis, a $9.60 for two shot. Four lengths separated the pair, while Dissembler was a poor third. The first two horses ran as if hitched together most of the mile and a sixteenth journey.

C. U. Buoyed for Miami Clash by Return of Sant'Ambrogio

Senior Back Boosts Attack for Fourth Meeting of Clubs; Hurricanes Unbeaten

By Jack Munhall

Strengthened by the return to shape of Hammerin' Hank Sant'-Ambrogio, who has been idle since a preseason scrimmage with Maryland, Catholic University's football squad, 30 strong, will entrain at Union Station today at 3:45 p. m. for Friday night's game at Miami University.

Sant'Ambrogio, a hard-running senior halfback, is expected to bolster a Cardinal ground attack that has been none too strong in C. U.'s first two games which produced a 13-0 defeat by Detroit and a 6-0 victory over St. Anselm. Another erstwhile injured Cardinal to be ready for Miami is Jack Reidy, senior guard.

Friday night's meeting will be the fourth game between Miami and Catholic University, the Cardinals holding a 2-1 edge in victories, having won, 7-0, in 1938 and 14-0 last year after dropping the opener of the rivalry, 7-0, in 1937.

May Be Sellout

Reports from Miami indicate that the game will be a sellout and that elaborate preparations are being made to make it the most colorful and most successful contest of the series. Senator Claude Pepper and other prominent Florida officials are expected to attend.

Miami's Hurricanes are undefeated and unscored-on in two games, having defeated Stetson, 19-0, and Tampa University, 27-0.

The Catholic University squad is scheduled to arrive in Miami tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock and to return to Washington at 11:45 a. m. Sunday.

Players On Trip

The following players will make the trip: Joe Boyle, Moe Shulman, George DuBois, Tom Carrig, Joe Carrig, Mike Cherello, Walter Laukaitis, John Schroeder, Jim Conlen, Julius Stanges, Casmir Kyscewski, Jim Nemec, Barnard Cody, Gerry Strang, Marty Donovan, Brendan Stynes, Hank Brostek, Charlie Moutenot, Al Norris, Pete Sachon, Julius Buckanavage, Leo Houck, Bill Griffin, Bill Mulvey, Jim Mulvihill, Huck Hughes, Kenny Blackbird, Hank Sant'Ambrogio and Jack Reidy.

The entire Catholic U. squad was to report for draft registration this morning at Taft Junior High School, Eighteenth and Otis Streets Northeast.

Kentucky Boasts Exceptional Punters

When George Washington goes up against Kentucky at Lexington Saturday in an effort to preserve its undefeated, untied record, the Colonials will be facing the second best punting team in the Nation.

A report released yesterday by the American Football Statistical Bureau revealed that the Wildcats, with an average of 46 yards per punt, are topped only by Texas Mines.

The art of fine punting is no innovation at Kentucky which has developed such booters as Ralph Kercheval, a member of the Brooklyn Dodgers and unquestionably the greatest punter ever to come out of the South. Before Kercheval the Wildcats boasted another superkicker in John (Shipwreck) Kelly who also was an outstanding ball toter.

Mullins, Allan Carry On

Carrying on the kicking tradition at Kentucky currently are Noah Mullins and Ermal Allen who, in addition to their ability to punt the ball for amazing yardage, are all-around offensive stars.

Still another item to worry G. W. Coach Reinhart as he prepares for the unbeaten and once-tied Wildcats is Dave Brown, Kentucky reserve quarterback, who ranks twentieth among the country's pass receivers.

Meantime the George Washington football camp has been bustling with activity. The Colonial line has been drilled relentlessly in faster charging, Reinhart realizing that a quick-moving forward wall is the best defense against Kentucky's passing and kicking.

The G. W. line probably will be augmented for the Kentucky game by the improved physical condition of Reserve End Dan Douglas, who is just rounding into shape after an emergency appendectomy last month. Douglas was used sparingly in last week's battle with Washington and Lee, but did not appear in the best of condition.

G. U. Loses Wixted

Misfortune struck the Georgetown eleven yesterday to claim Bill Wixted, 6 feet 4 inches, senior end, who starred agaist Waynesburg last week. Wixted reported with a badly swollen left leg as a result of a fall in Monday's practice, and will

Pepper Martin Named Sacramento Manager

1-Year Contract Given Hero of Cards' 1931 World Series Victory

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 15.—Pepper Martin, the Cardinals' colorful veteran outfielder and third baseman, today was named manager of the Sacremento club of the Pacific Coast League.

Martin, the madcap hero of the 1931 World Series, signed a one-year contract with the Cardinal farm club at an undisclosed salary. He has been with the club for 11 years.

Martin was given his new post at a conference with Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals; Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager, and Phil Bartelme, president of the Sacramento team.

The Wild Horse wound up his active playing career with a batting average this past season of .316, tying his best previous mark. He had a major league life-time record of .298.

Martin's almost single-handed defeat of the Philadelphia Athletics in the 1931 World Series was a feat still recalled by baseball fans in any discussion of individual glory.

Playing in his first regular season with the Cardinals, he entered the series unheralded. But when the seven games had ended, the young centerfielder had starred in all of them, making 12 hits in 24 times at bat for a .500 percentage.

He drove the Athletics wild with his base running, stealing five times with the characteristic head-first slide which he made famous. In the field he had 10 putouts and no errors.

The late John McGraw called Martin's work "the greatest individual performance in the history of the World Series."

Time caught up with the Wild Horse and this season the 36-year-old veteran was used only against left-handed pitchers or as a pinch-hitter.

Martin joined the Cardinal organization in 1925 and played with Fort Smith, Syracuse, Houston and Rochester before landing a permanent job in the majors. He had a brief try-out at the tail-end of the 1928 season and appeared in one world series game as a pinch runner.

In the off-season he lives on a farm near Oklahoma City.

Two other erstwhile titleholders, Yvon Robert and Danno O'Mahoney, are to appear on the preliminary program.

Navy's Soccer Team Faces Virginia Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Oct. 15—Navy's varsity soccer team, which dropped a 2-to-1 decision to the clever Gettysburg College players in the opening game of the season a week ago, will take on the University of Virginia booters tomorrow afternoon. The Navy plebes will meet Mount St. Joseph's High School, of Baltimore. Both games are scheduled to start simultaneously at 3:45.

Fine Offensive Play Expected To Feature VMI, Virginia Game

Records Against Each Other Last Two Years Presage High Point Battle Between Rivals

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 15.—The State's football headliner here Saturday between the well-fortified forces of Virginia and V. M. I. promises to exceed the brilliant offensive displays the two rivals worked up to make their last two meetings the most spectacular events of the historical series.

It was a race for points here in 1938, when the Cavaliers forged from behind twice to lock the count at 12 to 12. On next Saturday's corresponding date last year, the scene was reenacted almost to the letter up to the final lines. The Cadets added a field goal in that thrill-a-minute engagement at Lexington, and finished ahead, 16 to 13.

Virginia's current scoring department, staffed by such runners as Bill Dudley, Mosby Cardozo and Eddie Bryant, ably assisted by Nick Gianakos and Jim White, two fine pass-catching ends, made an auspicious start in registering 11 touchdowns while defeating Lehigh, Yale and Maryland. But the season's objective to date is V. M. I., and Cavalier arrangements call for turning loose everything they have to come Saturday afternoon.

In winning three of their four games this season, V. M. I. has crossed opponent goal lines nine times, but that hardly reveals the scoring effectiveness of such backs as Bosh Pritchard, Nelson Catlett, Joe Muha, Jimmy Matthews and Capt. Byron Walker. And Son Shelby, a starring veteran of two Virginia-V. M. I. games, will return to the scene of his varsity debut here in 1938, when he figured in one of the Cadet touchdowns.

Aiming for their first victory over V. M. I. since 1924, much of the Cavalier hopes seem to hinge around Dudley, who was the individual star with Pritchard in last year's classic at Lexington. Dudley's running and passing in his three-game appearances this season staked the Cavalier offense to total gains of around 600 yards. He has completed 22 of 43 passes, 5 for touchdowns, and scored three times himself in maintaining a ball-carrying average of better than 5 yards.

D. C. Women Golfers Meet Baltimore

Mrs. Hill Leads Team in Search Of First Victory

The District Intercity women's golf team will attempt to salvage one match out of the season's play today when it meets Baltimore's 12 best players over the Rolling Road course in Catonsville.

The local line-up lost to the Baltimoreans at Manor in the spring and were beaten by Philadelphia last month at Columbia. Today's match will settle the differences between the District and Baltimore golfers for the year as Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, of this city, went to Baltimore and won the Maryland State, while Mrs. Jerome Sloman, of Baltimore, came here and won the Middle Atlantic. The Washington line-up needs a victory today to make it an even break for the season.

Mrs. Bishop Hill, intercity team captain from Chevy Chase, announced that Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, will take over the No. 1 spot today, having lowered her handicap with a 78 over the Columbia course on Monday. Mrs. Davy's partner in the first bracket will be Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Kenwood. Their probable opponents will be Mrs. Sloman and Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, Baltimore.

Mrs. Stokes, Manor, and Mrs. Hill will play in the No. 2 position for the locals, with District Champion Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Richard Kreuzberg, Kenwood Club champ, in the next spot. Mrs. K. S. Giles, Indian Spring, and Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase; Mrs. T. O. Brandon, Washington, and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Congressional, and Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Kenwood, will round out the team. Mrs. H. J. Simons, Manor, is first alternate.

Four of the District's outstanding women golfers will be unable to play. Mrs. Leo Walper, Mrs. L. G. Pray, Mrs. David Clark and Louise Claytor will be missing from Mrs. Hill's line-up.

Browns Request 14 Games at Night To Save Franchise

St. Louis, Oct. 15 (AP).—Fourteen night baseball games are "vitally necessary for sufficient attendance to keep the Browns in St. Louis," President Donald Barnes said today.

Asked if that meant the American League club would move elsewhere if denied that number, Barnes quickly replied:

"Oh, no, I wouldn't go so far as to say that."

The league allowed the club 14 games under lights in 1940 even though circuit rules provide for only 7. President William Harridge in Chicago today expressed doubt more than seven would be permitted next year.

Even with the extra games at night the Browns' total paid season attendance at home was only 239,591, the lowest of the league.

Navy Fears Passing Attack Of Drake, Foe on Saturday

Halfback Moore of Midwest Eleven Has Completed 18 of 23 Passes; Cox Also Is Star

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 15.—Although Navy hurdled Princeton to ring up its third successive victory of the football campaign, Maj. "Swede" Larson, head coach, warned the Middies today they will have a tough foe in Drake University here on Saturday.

Today the Tars were sent through a lively scrimmage, first against a combination of junior varsity shock troops, and then with the strong plebe team, both outfits being equipped with Drake's formations and plays. Special emphasis was placed on defense against passing, for Drake is known to have a strong passing team, with Moore and O'Connor, both brilliant backs, capabale of heaving them at all angles. Moore has established the enviable record of completing 18 out of 23 passes. The Iowans also will have a weight advantage over the Middies, according to Navy scouts. Of the forward wall, Cox, who plays defensive center, and is a running guard on offense, is the outstanding star. Cox played only 5 minutes and Moore 10 in Drake's defeat by Kansas last Saturday. Both were injured.

Joe Sliwka, stalwart guard, was Navy's only casual in the Princeton battle. His injury is said to be slight and he is expected to be ready for the milling against Drake. Moreover, the Tars should be even stronger than when they faced the Tigers, as Johnny Harrell, No. 2, or blocking back, who has been out of play for nearly two weeks, through an injury, again is in good shape, and Dick Foster, captain and end, who has been unable to participate in either of the three previous games, also appears ready to go.

The encounter with Drake is attracting considerable interest because of its intersectional importance, and, moreover, the occasion will be the Middies' final appearance in Thompson Stadium, as all of the five remaining major games will be played away from base. Therefore a record gallery for the season is anticipated.

Mike Ryba Gets Another 'Best' Award

36-Year-Old Star Called Most Valuable In International

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 15.—Mike Ryba, who will return to the majors next year at the age of 36 in the role of relief pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, was designated today by a committee for the Sporting News as the most valuable player in the International League in 1940.

It marked the fourth time Mike has received the most valuable player award in as many different leagues over a span of 11 years.

The former Cardinal "one man" team—he played both the infield and outfield, caught and pitched—began his "most valuable" string back in 1930 in the Middle Atlantic League. He gained similar honors in the Western Association in 1931 and in the American Association in 1935.

As a first-string pitcher for Rochester this year, Ryba won 24 games and lost only 8. His record included five shutouts.

He was with the Cardinals in 1937 and 1938.

Sabotage Warning Sounded

Holcombe Parkes, of Washington, associate director of public relation of the Association of American Railroads, yesterday sounded a warning against that form of sabotage which attempts to undermine public confidence in railroads.

Addressing the annual convention of his organization's fire protection and insurance section in Chicago, Mr. Parkes declared that the railroads would be first to be attacked by enemy sabotage should a foreign power "want to destroy us."

Describing the forms that these attacks might take, he said: "A barrage of defeatist rumors would be unleashed . . . Every slight difference of opinion between the railroads and their employes, the railroads and the regulatory authorities and the railroads and their patrons would be magnified . . . every written or spoken word . . . to discredit railway management would be highlighted."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP).—The wheat market drifted around uncertainly today and finally wound up about steady.

A resumption of scattered buying, which had characterized yesterday's market, brought fractional advances at the start. This move carried December wheat to a top of 80 cents a bushel, the highest since last June. Later reactions, caused by easiness in stocks and reports of an increase in the offerings of actual wheat at Kansas City, moved prices slowly downward until yesterday's low 1/8 cent gains were practically erased.

Rallies near the close, however, carried wheat prices up to a close 1/8 lower to 1/4 higher than yesterday's finish; December, 94 1/4@94 3/8; May, 83 3/4@83 1/2. Corn, unchanged to 1/4 off; December, 59 3/8; May, 60 1/4. Oats, unchanged to 1/8 up, and lard, unchanged to 7 cents higher.

Increasing seriousness of the Balkan situation was watched warily. Cash wheat appeared less congested at the principal primary markets and demand was called moderate. Good rains were received generally in soft wheat territory and eastward and winter wheat territory was reported benefited by moisture yesterday and last night.

The volume of trade in the corn pit was light and the grain appeared to move slowly in sympathy with wheat. Oats were quiet, rye featureless, and soybeans fairly active, but mostly steady. A further advance in hog prices gave lard a modest price boost.

The Market

Spirited Rally, Led by Steels and Utilities, Marks Last Half-Hour of Stock Trading

New York, Oct. 15.—Steels and utilities led a belated rally in the stock market today after pivotal issues had spent most of the session moping in the rear ranks. Recovery really got under way in the final half-hour and, at the close, early losses running to a point or more for many favorites were converted into gains of as much. A few climbers, notably crucible Steel common, jumped more than 3.

The list presented a hesitant appearance at the start but few weak spots were in evidence. There was a sell-off shortly after mid-day with a slight pickup in volume.

Activity broadened on the last-minute come-back and transfers for the full proceedings totaled 547,400 shares compared with 402,350 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .3 of a point at 44.2, its best mark in a week.

Brokerage reasons for the quick forward shift in trend varied. Some attributed it partly to a revival of political optimism in Wall Street which, combined with the generally hopeful business picture, resulted in some short covering and purchases for the long side by those who thought the market was due for at least a temporary upswnig.

On the other hand, financial observers still were somewhat skeptical regarding happenings in the Balkans, the increasing tensity of the battle of England and Far Eastern developments. Many traders, consequently, inclined to maintain their side-line positions. Rails, rubbers and aircrafts did little and moderate declines were fairly well distributed at the last.

Prominent on the right-about were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Consolidated Edison, North American, Public Service of New Jersey, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Chrysler and American Smelting. Resistant throughout were Pathe, Loew's, Paramount, Montgomery Ward, Great Northern, Standard Oil of New Jersey and General Electric.

Losers included American Can, Texas Corporation, Douglas Aircraft, United States Rubber and Union Carbide. General Motors was unchanged along with numerous others.

Among the day's items of market interest were another substantail increase in Federal Reserve Member Bank commercial loans; Defense Commissioner Knudsen's warning against "spiraling prices," and reports the Army was preparing to place orders for some 78,000 motor trucks.

Tilting higher in the curb were Electric Bond and Share, American Gas, Northern States Power "A" and Wright Hargreaves. The turnover in this department was around 81,000 shares against 65,000 Monday.

Industrial and utilities bonds continued their steady upward climb in an exhibition of strength which contrasted with railroad and foreign government loans.

Gains of fractions were common throughout the utilities list, based on a slightly improved volume of transactions. The Associated Press average for this class of bonds reached a high mark for the year. The figure for industrials regained its previously established 1940 peak.

Hardest hit among the foreign obligations were those of Germany, Canada, Australia and Buenos Aires, the 4 3/4s of the Argentine capital slumping 5 1/2 points to 46 1/2.

Rails which experienced declines, mainly by fractions, included Southern Railway 4s at 57 1/4; Chesapeake & Ohio 3 1/2s at 101 1/4; Alleghany stamped 5s of '50 at 51 1/2, and Pennsylvania general 4 1/2s of '65 at 104 3/8.

Rising corporates included Anaconda 4 1/2s at 104 1/4; Bethlehem 3 1/2s at 106 1/2; Consolidated Edison 3 1/2s of '48 at 105 1/4; Detroit Edison 4 1/2s at 106 3/4, and International Paper 6s at 103.

U. S. Governments were irregular in small dealings, closing 7-32 point higher to 4-32 lower.

Cotton advanced for the first time in five days and hides continued to gain. Other major commodities for future delivery wavered.

Cotton closed 10 to 25 cents a bale higher at New York as recent persistent hedge selling let up. Hides gained .30 to .38 of a cent on reports of heavy spot sales of leather.

Demand for wheat slackened at Chicago under the influence of new offerings of actual wheat at Kansas City had increased. The final range was 1/8 cent a bushel lower to 1/8 up. Corn was unchanged to 1/4 down.

Rubber and silk, marked up when U. S.-Japanese relations tautened, reacted moderately. Other staples trimmed at New York included Straits tin, Santos coffee, domestic sugar and cocoa.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples, based on 1926 as 100, advanced to 74.45 from 74.22 Monday.

R. C. A. Arranges $15,000,000 Loan

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, announced today the company has arranged five-year bank loans amounting to $15,000,000 at 1 1/4 per cent.

The loans, it was pointed out, were coincident with plans for expansion of research and production facilities to speed national defense orders for radio equipment.

A portion of the proceeds will be used to retire $2,000,000 of currently outstanding bank loans which carry a 1 3/4 per cent interest rate. The interest saving will amount to $5,000 a year.

Sloan Warns Against "Blows From Within"

Nation Should Defend High Living Standard, Industrialists Told

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 15.—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, told a group of leading industrialists today the Nation should defend the high American standard of living against "attacks from within" as well as strengthen its military position.

Discussing the mobilization of the Nation's economic resources for defense, Sloan contended the United States, in the initial stages, at least, should increase its general productivity so as to take up employment slack.

"If we could increase the national income from 70 or 72 billions to around 80 billion dollars," he said, "there would be ample margin to produce all the material for national defense while plans were being developed to construct the special plant and machinery essential for such an entirely different type of production."

Time Is Needed

The American way of living, he asserted, must be defended from within and without.

"So far as I am concerned," he added, "I have no reservation that, given a reasonable amount of time, we can develop and will develop a most effective defense on the military side. I know that is going to be done.

"But, on the economic side, I have grave apprehensions. I believe the greatest danger and the most difficult part of our defense, using that term in its broader sense, is a protection of the American way of living against attacks from within—not from without."

Sloan introduced a forum discussion of economic aspects of defense.

Tool Shortage Seen

William S. Knudsen, member of the National Advisory Defense Commission and former president of General Motors, hinted that one catch in maintaining the American standard of living during the defense effort may be a shortage of machine tools.

"We are short of tool capacity," said Knudsen. "We need all the help we can get in that end of production.

"If you industrialists think you are going to get tools to carry out the American way of life, you better take another look."

However, the former General Motors production chief explained the defense planners started out with the intention of supplementing regular peacetime industrial activity with the vast military requirement.

So far, he pointed out, the program has been concerned mainly with acquiring tools, primary material and emergency goods for an army of 1,200,000 men.

"Time is short," he remarked. "Much depends on the problem of getting the tools for production of the main equipment."

Standardization Urged

Charles F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors in charge of research, suggested standardization of proven defense items as one way of speeding the program.

Mass production, he noted, "simply means duplicate production." "I have always said," continued Kettering, "that we didn't manufacture automobiles. We just published them. You set up a type, like you do in a printing press, and then print a lot of that material."

From the defense emergency may come progress in production technique to speed the military output, said Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation.

Machine Tool Operations at Record Rate

Output Reported More Than Double That of 1929

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 15.—The defense-spurred machine tool industry is speeding production at a rate more than double either 1939's or 1929's, its trade association reported today.

The National Machine Tool Builders' Association, with members representing most of the industry, expects 1940 shipments to total about $400,000,000.

As far as the organization's annals go—to post-war 1919—this is a record, and twice the estimated $300,000,000 shipments both last year and in generally-prosperous 1929.

The association's September operating rate, figured on the basis of payroll hours, climbed 1.6 points over August to 94.9 per cent of estimated capacity.

The rate stood at 74.6 per cent in September, 1939, but the production rise has been much more spirited than the figures indicate, since estimated capacity itself has increased 41 per cent in the year.

Hans W. Ireland Made Treasurer of American S. & T.

Directors of the American Security & Trust Co. yesterday elected Hans W. Ireland as treasurer, succeeding James C. Dulin, jr., who resigned recently.

Mr. Ireland joined the staff of the Home Savings Bank in 1908 as a runner and served in various capacities until 1913 when he was made manager of its Southwest Branch. In 1917 he was elected an assistant treasurer and a year later was placed in charge of the Northeast Branch.

Following the merger of the Home Savings Bank with American Security & Trust Co., Mr. Ireland continued as an assistant treasurer of the latter institution.

He has served as chairman of the executive council of the Bank Deposit Section of the D. C. Bankers Association and last May was made chairman of the publicity committee of the National Safe Deposit Council.

Anderson Rolls 180-435 for Cameo Pinmen

Mildred Jenkins Sets New League Mark With Quadruple Strike

Johnny Anderson, Cameo Furniture, was as hot as lava from an active volcano last night at Takoma Recreation when the Electrical League resumed play. Anderson had a blistering game of 180 and followed with a super set of 435 to draw the plaudits of the gallery. He led his quintet to team laurels of 616 and 1,795 for game and set, respectively, taking all three games from Bray & Scarff to go into a tie for league leadership with Atlantic Electric.

ARCADIA

Mildred Jenkins, of the Dixie Flyers, in the Railroad Retirement Board Ladies' League, set an all-time league record with a high game of 152, having a quadruple-header strike. It was one of the most astonishing exhibits of super rolling ever staged by a woman bowler at Arcadia. Miss Jenkins had high set of 323 and led her team to highs of 502 and 1,457.

CONVENTION HALL

Washington Post teams squared off with Brill, No. 7, and Joe Colliflower, No. 1, taking individual highs for the evening with 146 and 343, respectively. The No. 7 quintet won all team honors with 544-1,530. Team No. 10 is out in front of the others with 12-9.

PENN RECREATION

Over a hundred Roosevelt High School girls staged the inaugural of their bowling season, with physical education credits for the semester their goal. A league is being formed of high school misses under direction of Eddie Espey and Archie Himmelfarb and regular weekly contests will be held at the Penn Alleys.

CLARENDON

Dick Sieber, Clarendon Fire Department, and Stu Stuart, Mutual Insurance, took highs for game and set in the Clarendon Commercial A League rolling with 145-386, respectively. The Fire Department had high team game of 590, with Progressive Cleaners taking the set with 1,868. Fall Church Motors, formerly in seventh position, took all its games from Rosslyn Gas and hiked its standing to second place. Furniture, Inc., is out in the lead with 11-4.

PETWORTH

The Federal Power Commission Mixed League started with Arthur Hough leading the men with high counts of 123-338 while Marie Nagle and Ollie Lohmeier took ladies' laurels with 106-272 for game and set, respectively. This 10-team mixed league will roll at Petworth each Tuesday night.

SILVER SPRING

The Maryland-D. C. Ladies rolled with Mary Fike, Shaffer Flowers, and Mildred Peacock, Sandford's, Inc., taking high counts for game and set of 138-372, respectively. The Bergmann Laundry quintet took team honors with 572-1605, the latter figure equaling second high set of the season. Shaffer Flowers, National Ale, Bergmann's Laundry and Sandford's, Inc., took all three games from opponents. Ruth Rothgeb has high average of 111.

Bill Ackerman on Hunting

Virginia has always had exceptional wild turkey shooting and the Virginia Game Commission and sportsmen in every section of the State have been, for the past several years, working to better this attractive hunting.

ACKERMAN

Right now approximately 500 sleek, wary wild turkeys are in the pens at the Camp Lee turkey farm, to be released later this month on some 29 different areas of good turkey range throughout the whole State.

These birds were produced at Camp Lee by the commission this summer from eggs of captive wild turkey hens, which had been mated with the native wild gobblers found in abundance in the forests in the vicinity of the farm.

Just before release, the birds are placed in special conditioning pens to prepare them for life in the wild according to a technique worked out by the commission. During the conditioning period the turkeys are taught to fear man and acquire the alertness for signs of danger which is so typical of the Virginia native wild turkey.

While the turkeys are learning to care for themselves, arrangements for handling at the release points are being completed. Sportsmen have not only built these release pens, but will do the actual work of releasing.

The pens are to prevent excessive "drift" until the birds become accustomed to their new surroundings.

Reports from many sections of Virginia seem to indicate that quail shooting will not be up to normal this fall. While apparently a good supply of old birds were carried over from last year, very few broods of young birds have been reported.

What young birds there are apparently hatched out late in the summer and may not have attained their full growth by the opening day of this season. Wildlife experts are inclined to believe that the unusually cold, wet summer was largely responsible for the unsatisfactory nesting season.

In keeping with its policy of making its hunting regulations fit the current game situation, the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries has announced somewhat more rigid restrictions on hunting than were in effect last year. The daily bag limit on quail has been reduced to eight birds. The hunting season will be from November 20 to January 20 east of the Blue Ridge, and November 15 to December 31 in the counties west of the Blue Ridge.

Nine bear hunts in Pisgah National Forest have been announced by C. N. Mease, chief refuge supervisor. Three two-day hunts will be held in each of the refuges, as follows: Daniel Boone Area, November 4-5, 11-12 and 18-19; Mount Mitchell Area, November 6-7, 13-14 and 20-21; Sherwood Forest, November 8-9, 15-16 and 22-23.

A total of nine successful applicants and six alternates will be determined by three public drawings, one for each area, to be held at Ashville. The successful applications must be accompanied by $5, and a further fee of $20 will be required. For full information write to Mr. Mease at Ashville.

Boston College Alumni Meet Here Tomorrow

Boston College alumni of Washington will gather at the Lee-Sheraton Hotel tonight at 6:30 o'clock to hear an address by Jack Hagerty, Georgetown University's head coach of football.

On November 16, Hagerty will send his unbeaten Georgetown team against Boston College at Boston in the game that looms as the most important on the schedule of both colleges. Hagerty has not intimated that he will reveal to the B. C. alumni the exact nature of the attack Georgetown will use in the game.

not be available for Friday night's game with V. P. I. at Griffith Stadium.

The injury to Wixted comes at an inopportune time for the Hoyas, since Mike Kopcik, the squad's outstanding wingman, also may miss the V. P. I. game, with injuries sustained against Waynesburg.

Meantime unusual spectator interest was reported in the renewal after 21 years of athletic relations between Georgetown and Virginia Poly. Advance sales, provided by many purchases by alumni and supporters of V. P. I., point to one of the largest crowds to see a Georgetown football game here in many years.

Maryland's football delegation to the game with Florida Saturday at Gainesville, including President H. C. Byrd, will entrain at 4 p. m., Thursday, over the Seaboard Railway and reach its destination early the next morning.

The Terps will stop at Keystone Heights, about 25 miles from Gainesville, where they will hold a workout Friday afternoon. The Maryland squad will not go to the scene of the game until time to dress for the game.

'Gator Coach Faces Hard Task Building Defense for Terps

By the Associated Press

Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 15.—Coach Tom Lieb took account of his disabled players today, then pulled his line-ups out of the proverbial hat as he drilled the University of Florida football team until dusk in preparation for Saturday's homecoming game with the Maryland Terrapins.

The major item under consideration was setting up a defense to stop Maryland's little Joe Murphy and his backfield companions. The varsity was on defense against Maryland plays as run by freshmen in a dummy session in which the name of Murphy was mentioned aplenty. With eight players on the doubtful list because of injuries line-ups were shifted considerably.

flame, but the injury should be cleared up in time.

Central's "unpredictable" is Harry Martin, one of the few three-letter youngsters in local high schools. In contrast to Smallwood, Martin can do most anything of a grid nature brilliantly. How he does them is another thing.

Instead of running with the ball tucked under his arm, Martin prefers to wave it like a flag in one hand. When the play calls for a pass he is liable to run, or vice versa, so even his teammates are kept in the dark part of the time.

The first touchdown the Vikings scored in their opener against Gonzaga was on a 19-yard gallop by the fleet halfback. But Coach Hardy Pierce confides the scoring play was supposed to be a pass to Sam Di Blasi in the end zone. Martin merely decided at the last minute he'd rather run with the ball.

Ballston Manager Plans to Start Football League

H. M. Windsor, general manager of the Ballston Stadium, is anxious to form one or more football leagues of teams of any weight, games to be played at night under the Stadium's powerful arc lights.

Though Windsor realizes it is quite late in the season to be starting a football league, he believes that there are many newly formed elevens which desire to be affiliated with a league.

Any such teams may get in touch with Windsor at Metropolitan 6865 during the day, or at Oxord 1492 in the evening.

Dealer Indicted In Row Over Navy Relics

Accused of Larceny Of Log Books of 'Old Ironsides'

Leon Miller, 40, a book dealer, was accused by the grand jury in the District Court yesterday of absconding with the log books of the famous frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides" and other historic papers.

Miller, former proprietor of a book shop at 1713 H Street Northwest, was indicted on a charge of larceny after trust on the complaint of Mrs. May R. La Vallette, Hampton, Va.

Mrs. La Vallette, widow of a descendant of Admiral E. A. F. La Vallette, once commander of the Navy's African squadron, said she gave the collection to Miller to sell in 1937. Besides the Constitution's logs, she said, the collection included 270 letters between the admiral and his captains, two manuscript books by Commander Thomas MacDonough, the log books of other Navy vessels of a century ago, three water color paintings from the Constitution's log book and other documents.

Nathan Wallack, collector, 3933 Military Road, told officials that he paid Miller $450 for nine log books. Mrs. La Vallette said she never got this money and that when she asked for return of her property, Miller first stalled, then vanished.

D. C. Firm Low Bidder On Jail Structures

The C. M. H. Co., of this city, yesterday submitted a low bid of $255,600 to construct a hospital and administration building at the District of Columbia Jail.

This work will complete remodeling of the prison, which was begun two years ago with PWA funds. The job will be paid for from regular District appropriations.

Contract Bridge

On today's hand, Ossie Jacoby got the bid for four spades. The almost psychic way in which he managed the play gave proof of the wisdom of his opponents in not doubling.

He "guessed" correctly the location of both the doubleton honor in trumps and the outstanding heart honors, winning an overtrick on a deal that some players might have gone down on.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

Opening lead: 5 ♣.

East opened the five of clubs, West put up the queen and Ossie won with the king. He played a low spade to dummy's jack, and West went in with the ace, returning a club. This was taken by declarer's ace, as the diamond nine was discarded from dummy. The eight of hearts was led and the queen finessed; it held. A spade was returned, and Jacoby confidently and unhesitatingly played a low spade from his hand, forcing out East's king and keeping the queen to draw West's ten.

A diamond was led by the defense, which was captured by South's king, and a third round of trumps pulled West's last spade.

Again with an assurance as if he could see through the backs of the cards, Jacoby led the jack of hearts, compelling East to cover and felling West's ten under the ace. This play, whether East decided to cover or not, established the heart nine for the third round and developed the remainder of the suit.

Declarer made four spades with an overtrick, losing two spades.

New officers elected at the June meeting were introduced, including Mary Healy, Holy Trinity Academy, president; John Troy, Gonzaga High, vice president; Marie West, Immaculata Seminary, recording secretary; Margaret Garvey, Holy Cross Academy, corresponding secretary; Marian Lennon, Sacred Heart Academy, treasurer, and Mary McDonald, Notre Dame Academy, publicity chairman.

President Signs Revised Naval Personnel Act

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill to revive and clarify provisions of the Naval Personnel Act of 1938.

Hereafter, boards named to select officers for promotion will consider the medical records of those under consideration, on the theory that such records are evidence of their endurance and stamina. Since 1938 records of physical fitness have been withheld from selection boards and the officers were examined after their certification for promotion.

Another change gives officers adjudged fitted for promotion but not retained on active duty the retired pay of the grade to which promoted, while another section requires that all actions of selection boards must be by two-thirds vote.

SUPERMAN — Clark Curbs His Curiosity — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

REALLY, CLARK! MRS. DREXMORE IS A WONDERFUL PERSON TO WORK FOR, BUT I MUST ADMIT THAT I DO MISS THE SWELL TIMES WE HAD AT THE PLANET!
I—ER—I MEAN, WE MISS YOU TOO! (I WON'T GIVE AWAY THE NEWS THAT HER OLD JOB AWAITS HER ANY TIME SHE WANTS IT! LET HER HAVE THE PLEASURE OF FINDING THAT OUT FOR HERSELF.)
YOU'RE REALLY QUITE AN ATTRACTIVE PERSON, CLARK! I'M AFRAID THAT IN THE HEAT OF OUR FORMER COMPETITION I OVERLOOKED YOUR BETTER QUALITIES...
ER—THERE'S SOMEONE AT THE DOOR!
BENTON!
YOU—DO YOU MIND LEAVING US ALONE?
ONE EVENING, CLARK CALLS UPON LOIS—AND IS IMMENSELY SURPRISED AT THE PLEASANT RECEPTION HE RECEIVES..
YOU'D BETTER GO, CLARK.. IT'S—IT'S BETTER THAT YOU DO!
VERY WELL. IF THAT'S THE WAY YOU WANT IT!
OUTSIDE LOIS' DOOR, CLARK PAUSES MOMENTARILY MENTALLY DEBATING WHETHER OR NOT TO USE HIS SUPER-HEARING....
LOIS IS WORRIED ABOUT SOMETHING, PERHAPS....
BUT THEN, HE WALKS OFF....
I MUST CURB THESE CURIOUS IMPULSES OF MINE. IN MY ANXIETY TO HELP PEOPLE, SOMETIMES I FORGET IT'S POOR MANNERS TO EAVESDROP UPON ANYONE'S PERSONAL AFFAIRS.
FROM THE TONE OF THE ENSUING CONVERSATION BETWEEN LOIS AND BENTON IT APPEARS IT WOULD HAVE BEEN BEST HAD CLARK CONTINUED HIS EAVESDROPPING!

WELL, WOMEN WORE TIGHT COLLARS, TOO, UNTIL THEY LEARNED COMMON SENSE
WELL, I GOT TO HAND IT TO 'EM. MEN HAVE ALL THE TROUBLES NOW
OH, HAVE THEY? A MAN NEVER HAS A SLIP THAT HANGS TWO INCHES BELOW HIS SKIRT

What the average young man in Washington is thinking about—for that matter, what the non-average young man in Washington is thinking about—as he registers today for the first peace-time conscription in this Nation's history will be graphically portrayed for you over WJSV today.

The radio station's mobile unit, complete with Arch McDonald, the popular commentator, is making a tour of various registration places and, at each of those visited, Arch is to single out a varied group of young men and ask questions and more questions as to their experiences and reactions.

At the conclusion Arch is to interview Brigadier General Albert L. Cox, Selective Service executive of the District, for a general report on how the registration is going. The program is to be heard during Arch's regular "Sports Review" program over WJSV at 6:15 p. m.

At 10:15 p. m. WJSV and the Columbia network are bringing you a man-in-the-street program from the entire country. This interview program is to begin at National Selective Service Headquarters in Washington, where officials will tell you just how things have worked out throughout the Nation. Then will come a switch to New York's heavily populated lower East Side for a cross-section of people's opinions there; to a mid-Western farming community, for the rural reaction; and then to one of the swankier sections of Hollywood. All of which should give you an idea.

Contest Offers Flying Course Free to 5 in Washington Area

Only Requirements Few Minutes' Study And Physical Fitness

Five residents of the District area, not eligible for flight training under the Civil Aeronautics Authority plan for training military pilots, are going to be given an opportunity to learn to fly.

They needn't buy anything or join anything. The only requirements are that they be high school graduates, residents of Washington, Arlington County, Alexandria, Prince Georges or Montgomery County, 18 to 40 years old, and that they show themselves sufficiently interested in aviation to put in a few minutes of study and prove they are physically fit to fly.

This offer is being made by The Post; the Aero Club of Washington; Arthur Godfrey, announcer for WJSV; Beacon Airport and Columbus University. It will give the five candidates selected 72 hours of ground school and 8 hours of dual flying instruction, taking them over the most difficult part of the path to a private pilot license.

The Post, Arthur Godfrey and Beacon Airport each will sponsor one complete course at Beacon Airport. Columbus University will sponsor two ground courses at its own aviation school, and the Aero Club of Washington will supplement them with two dual flight instruction courses at Beacon Airport.

Requirements Are Simple

The program grew out of a desire of the Aero Club of Washingtown to stimulate interest in nonmilitary flying with a view to eventual replacement of commercial and airplane pilots called into the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps. When the five successful candidates have completed their preliminary training under this plan, they will be ready to begin accumulating solo flying hours toward whatever license they choose to earn. The program, by its very nature, is designed to select those five who will be most likely to continue flying and to make useful and competent pilots.

The requirements are simple:

Every day The Post will print five questions on aviation, and Arthur Godfrey will announce them over WJSV on his Sundial program between 6:30 a. m. and 9 a. m. These questions will deal with all phases of flying, reaching into its history, its mechanics, its rules, its peculiar problems of weather and navigation. These questions will be offered today, tomorrow and Friday of this week and Monday through Friday of next week and the week after, the last questions being printed and broadcast November 5. The contest will close November 7 and winners will be announced November 11.

If you are 18 to 40, inclusive, in normal physical condition, a high school graduate, a resident of the District area and not employed by The Post, WJSV, Beacon Airport or Columbus University, or a member of the Aero Club of Washington, you may enter. There is no entrance fee, but before any winner is accepted for training, he or she must submit a certificate of physical fitness acceptable to the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Examination for certificate, necessary before a yone can receive a pilot license, will be made at a cost of $6 by any physician appointed to conduct such examinations by the CAA. A list of these physicians may be obtained from The Post, the Aero Club of Washington, or the CAA.

Answers to questions should not be submitted daily, but held and submitted at the end of each week to the Aero Contest Editor, The Washington Post. They will be examined and rated by three judges appointed by the Aero Club.

These judges are William P. MacCracken, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics; Jerome Lederer, chief of the safety board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and Representative Melvin Maas, of Minnesota, a Marine Corps Reserve pilot.

The five winners, and women as well as men are eligible, will be guests of the Aero Club of Washington at an Armistice Day ball at the Raleigh Hotel the night of November 11.

Start Today

It is an opportunity of a lifetime to learn to fly at no cost other than that of the physical examination, without which no one can be licensed as a pilot under any circumstances. The most costly and difficult phase of pilot training is accomplished without cost to you; the rest is simply a matter of building up flying time.

Read the questions today. If you know the answers, write them neatly on a separate sheet of paper, using one side only, and file your answers away to be sent to the Aero Contest Editor, The Washington Post, at the end of this week.

Should you need help, a list of books is suggested, all of which may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents at nominal cost. Start today. You may win your wings and step into the ranks of a profession you have always envied.

Documents to Help In Answering Questions

Here is a list of suggested documents for study in the contest for flight training. These documents may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents at prices quoted after each. There will be few question, however, that cannot be answered after consulting a standard encyclopedia.

Digest of the Civil Air Regulations for Student and Private Pilots, 10 cents.

Primary Ground Study Manual, Civil Aeronautics Bulletin No. 21, 15 cents.

Practical Air Navigation and the Use of the Aeronautical Charts of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, 65 cents.

National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics Report No. 474: Nomenclature of Aeronautics, 20 cents.

Any United States Weather Bureau weather map and its accompanying explanations will be found useful. Information also may be obtained from the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Munitions Building; Civil Aeronautics Authority, Commerce Building; Coast and Geodetic Survey, Commerce Building.

Rules of the Aero Contest

1. Contest is open to all persons, men or women, between 18 and 40, inclusive, who are high school graduates in normal physical condition and who are residents of Washington, Arlington County, Alexandria, Montgomery or Prince Georges Counties. No one who has attended any aviation ground school will be eligible.
2. Employes of The Washington Post, Radio Station WJSV, Beacon Airport, Columbus University or members of the Aero Club of Washington may not compete.
3. Answers to questions must be submitted weekly, at the end of each of the three weeks the contest continues, to the Aero Contest Editor, The Washington Post. Answers should be as brief as is compatible with accuracy and completeness and will be rated by three judges appointed by the Aero Club of Washington on the basis of accuracy and clarity.
4. The final list of five questions will be published and broadcast November 5. All answers must be received by The Post before midnight November 7 in order to be entered in the contest.
5. The five winners must undergo the required physical examination for a pilot license under regulations of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the cost of $6 for this examination to be borne by the contestant. Should any winner fail to pass the examination, the next in order will be named until five candidates for training have been selected and certified by an official medical examiner.

Couldn't Make Police Understand

Expressing "pro-German sympathies" in nearby Howard County (Md.) is dangerous business, even if the speaker is joking.

This was the discovery yesterday of Floyd Glenn Hall, Treasury Department lawyer, who jokingly posed as a German army officer in a tavern near Laurel, Md., and entered upon a tragi-comic adventure which led to jail.

Hall, 43, who lives at 1250 Tenth Street Northwest, was arrested by Maryland State Police Monday for expressing "pro-German sympathies," grilled for two hours, fingerprinted, photographed, locked up incommunicado over night and fined $6.45 by a justice of the peace yesterday in Howard County.

Monday afternoon Hall and a friend named Don stopped for dinner at the Horseshoe Inn, a large roadside tavern on the Washington Boulevard near Laurel, Md. Soon, two young truck drivers, brothers named Atkinson, entered and joined them at the table.

The four men chatted. The conversation hit the war in Europe. The Atkinson boys were for intervention, Hall for isolation.

"Hitler isn't solely responsible for the war," Hall said. "He was a creature of the Treaty of Versailles, which drove Germany into economic desperation and permitted him to come to power. The present war was created by the men who made the peace after the last war."

"You're not pro-German, are you?" one Atkinson asked suspiciously.

"Sure he is," answered Don, winking at Hall. "You don't know who this is. Let me introduce you. This is Capt. Eric von Blitzen of the German army."

The Atkinson boys' eyes widened. They leaned over, listened attentively as Hall picked up the joke.

"Sure," said Hall. "I've got the inside dope on what's going to happen in Europe. England can't last a week. The German army will be in London in seven days. We're going to take those Britishers over so fast they won't know what happened."

The younger Atkinson got up, made a phone call, returned. A few minutes later the waitress whispered in his ear. The brothers left the tavern.

Five minutes later the waitress returned. "Someone wants to see you outside," she told Hall.

Outside stood Corporal Edward J. Crew, of the Maryland State Police.

"We've been hearing about your pro-German sympathies," said Crew. "Where do you get with that kind of stuff? I know who you are, Capt. Von Blitzen. You're under arrest."

Hall roared with laughter, explained the joke. But Crew was adamant. Hall produced his driver's license, a Treasury Department check, other identification. But Crew took Hall to the Waterloo State Police station.

Put in a cell, refused an opportunity to call his wife, Hall explained patiently that it was all a mistake. For two hours he answered the questions of a second corporal. No, he hadn't studied German at school. No, he had no German relatives. No, his parents and grandparents did not come from Germany.

He was born in Hanover County, Va. His wife's maiden name was Cusack. She wasn't German either. Hall was fingerprinted, photographed, thrown back into a cell. At 7 a. m. yesterday he shouted a request to telephone his wife. No answer. For two hours he yelled. At 9 a. m. he was allowed to call his wife.

At 1:30 p. m., after Mrs. Hall had pleaded for an hour, the couple was put in a scout car and taken to Savage, Md. Down a narrow dirt road they found a small frame house. There Justice of the Peace Edwin Haslup held court. There were no witnesses. Corporal Crew reported the testimony of the two truck drivers, all hearsay. Hall pleaded not guilty of "disturbing the peace." He was fined $15 plus $1.45 for costs.

"Did I commit a crime?" Hall asked. "Was I drunk? Did I speak in a loud tone? Did I disturb anyone?"

"No," said the Judge.

Last night Judge Haslup told The Post that he had fined Hall for "disturbing the peace" by impersonating a German army officer and "being generally foolish." Corporal Crew, reached by phone at his Baltimore home, confirmed the details of the story.

"He was sympathizing with the Germans," Crew said. "Then he told me he was winking all the time at another boy I didn't talk to. But that's bad stuff, saying the Germans'd take Britain in a week and stuff like that."

Last night Hall told The Post he would enter a suit for false arrest.
